Back for the third year in a row, The Rhododendron invited everyone to look back at the past year. Each photograph and every word told a story all its own. Whether it was visions of our football team triumphantly winning a national championship, memories from the tropical "Aloha" homecoming, or the unconditional support students showed for Hurricane Katrina victims, each event that took place separated this year from any other. The landscape of campus changed with many new additions. Eyes gazed up at the new four-story library, students stretched their legs in the new Student Recreation Center, and not a day went by where some kind of power tool wasn't heard in the multiple buildings undergoing renovations. This new look even extended to Washington, D.C. with a refurbished App House. So what other images stood out? Go ahead, see for yourself.

Experience the

Leaving home and friends, moving belongings, worrying about class work and a different lifestyle, adjusting to new faces, new terrain, and new habits all encompass the first day of college. As though adapting to college life wasn't difficult enough, sometimes first days had the audacity to go bad! Though there were many venues and programs to aid and prepare students for the transition into college, some students found themselves with bad first days and interesting stories to tell about them.

Matthew Roden joked about his first day. "My first day of college I was walking with a friend I already knew from high school. We had been looking for the cafeteria and didn't know where we were going. Hungry and lost, we decided to just follow some other people who were walking. Eventually

I slipped down some stairs and a bunch of people laughed. I really embarrassed myself...it was no good."

While Roden's experience was socially crippling, another student had a similar incident, which incurred more injury than insult.

Joshua Blackburn, a transfer student from Wilkes Community College, seemed to have the domino effect with his bad day. "I lived in University Highlands and rode the AppalCART to class. When we pulled up to Raley Hall I stepped off the bus and slipped on the last step. I hobbled to class and missed an important lecture on the syllabus. After class, I went to the infirmary and had to wait an hour before I was seen." The now senior went on to say, "At least I will have memories of my first day." •Ashley Daniels

Walk for awareness

“We’re gonna keep on walking forward, keep on walking forward, keep on walking forward, never turning back...”

It had been a year since ASU’s campus had seen silence, but this year it happened again. Except for the quiet shuffle of feet and the occasional rustle of arms, the path from Sanford Mall to Kidd Brewer Stadium was completely silent as hundreds walked in remembrance during the sixteenth annual Walk for Awareness. The walk was well-lit with a sea of small flashlights as students, staff, faculty and members of the community walked to honor victims of domestic abuse and sexual violence.

Formed in memory of Jeni Gray, an ASU graduate and employee, who was abducted, raped and murdered by a man in the Boone community; the walk was established not only to remember but also to unite. Students were urged to walk with friends and neighbors as a statement of concern for the Appalachian family and members in the community.

“As a woman I am really excited that so many people came to show their support for the victims,” said Ariel Lipscomb, BGLAAD member. “I am here walking with other members of BGLAAD to show our support for those who want to make a difference and also make a statement that we do not condone acts of violence.”

This year, sponsored by University Highlands and The Appalachian Parents Association, the theme for the walk was “Can You Hear Me Now: We’re Clear, No Static.” The guest was speaker Martha McCaughey, director of Women’s Studies. McCaughey commented on the importance of respect in our society and reaching beyond comfort zones to not only react to, but also prevent violence from ever occurring. The walk was completed in silence until everyone arrived at the stadium where the Gospel Choir led the crowd in the annual song “Never Turning Back.” •Ashley Daniels

Jim Wand, hypnotist

Read these words very slowly, one by one, gently relax your eyes, breathe deeply, and become entranced by the sound of your voice reading this article about hypnotist Jim Wand. Wand left students spellbound after his performance at Farthing Auditorium Sept. 16.

A row of students lined the stage while being told by Wand to gaze intensely into a blinking red light while relaxing to the soothing sounds of his voice. After a couple minutes, most of them clumsily slumped over in their chairs. Even some members in the audience slipped into a case of narcolepsy. The students in the audience then ran to the stage as if they were triumphant Olympic gods. For about an hour and a half, Wand had participants doing all kinds of bizarre stunts—and afterwards they could hardly recall any of it.

"I remember looking at a red light and waking up," participant Patrick Pope said.

His conscious mind did not recall taking the role of Britney Spears and singing a rendition of "Hit Me Baby One More Time." When asked what song he wanted to sing, he said "Old McDonald Had a Farm," but Wand persuaded him to sing the Britney Spears single instead.

"I felt really creative and relaxed," Meegan Glynn said. "I remember being a wrestler." Glynn called herself "The Guillotine" with a deep growl. She also danced and sang to the lyrics of "Save a Horse, Ride a Cowboy" during a mini-American Idol concert.

Tyler Roy acted as the background musician for the performers. His instrument was a tangled mess of colorful balloons that he wore over his head. He played in the key of "Q" for one song.

"It was kind of like a body buzz," Roy said.

Wand continued toying with the students. At one point he made them imagine they were at the Kentucky Derby and they used their shoes as binoculars. When he asked them the names of their horses, such replies as "Happy Appy," "Chancellor," "Facebook," and "Yosef the frickin' Mountaineer" were given.

Now keep reading the words slowly, one by one, relax your eyes and breathe. When you reach the end of this sentence, you will snap back to reality and turn the page for the next story.

Help for

Though the actual damage hit some 12 hours away, the face of Appalachian's campus was instantly changed by the fatal visit of Hurricane Katrina. While the nation stood by dictating guilt and reason for the natural disaster, Appalachian students turned their sights to more constructive efforts, helping the victims affected by the storm.

"Personally it really hurt and angered me to see people on the news talk about who to blame," said ACT office employee, Jamarl Clark. "It was a natural disaster and it wasn't like it could be stopped. I don't think one people or one race should have been blamed, instead, rather than talking, everyone should have contributed and done what they could to help."

Days after news of the hurricane reached students in the high country, groups were organized, fundraisers were planned and donation points were set up around every corner on campus.

INTAPP students Katelin Kennedy and Carrie Miller manned a collection table for their organization. The students sold Mardi Gras beads for one dollar each to aid the university's relief efforts. "Everyone generally has a good attitude," commented Miller. "If they can't give to us, they explain that they have already given to another group on campus supporting the same cause, but they are always positive about it."

Attempts and ideas to help victims were as varied as the students themselves. Everything from blood and canned food drives, book collections, showings of the movie Grease, bake sales, dormitory penny wars, sympathy cards, donation matching (Phi Eta Sigma, Gamma Beta Phi), and even concerts and dance parties held in Legends contributed to the campus-wide relief effort.

In the time surrounding the disaster students were not the only ones lending a helping hand. Chancellor Peacock announced to the students and faculty via e-mail that the university would open its doors to students displaced by the hurricane, and also urged organizations to continue to help those less fortunate.

Kim Mitchell, representative from the Center for Student Involvement and Leadership, spoke on the spirit of Appalachian after the disaster.

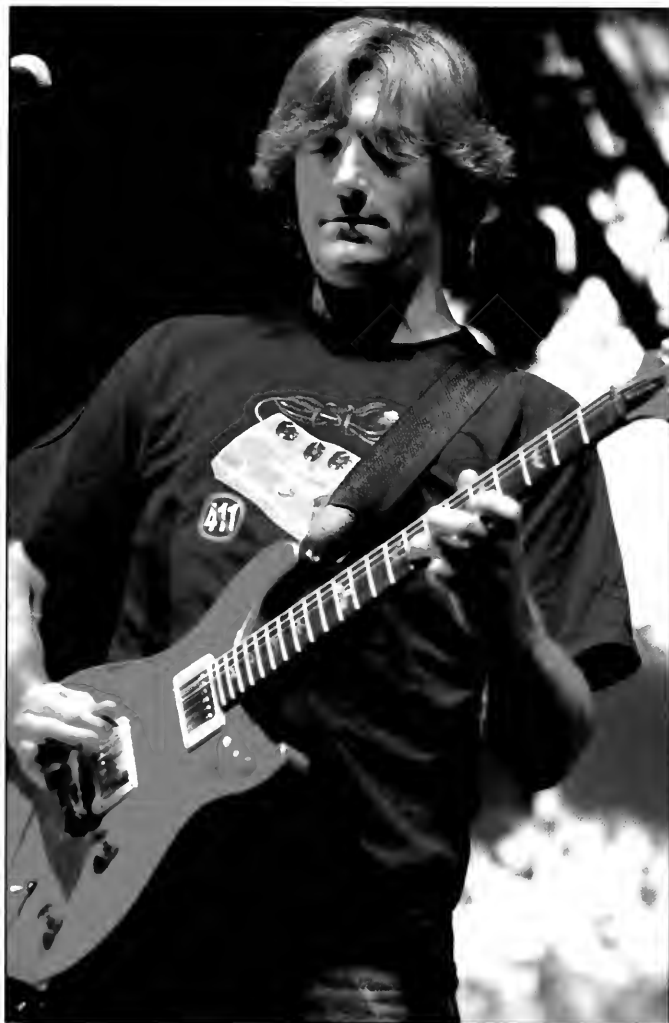

"Pretty much since the first week we put it out there that we would be a collection point for those that wanted to help. The students poured in with ideas and donations. We were just a collection point; the students were the ones behind the efforts." •Ashley Daniels

Widespread fans go wild as the concert takes place in the Convocation Center on campus. Students were always excited to have the opportunity to see various bands play so close to where they live and go to school. •Katie Ford

Hundreds of fans flooded into the Holmes Convocation Center on Sept. 21 to see jam band Widespread Panic perform. The excitement mounted with the first song played which lasted for about 38 minutes, giving a preview for what was next to come. Widespread was infamous for their ongoing song sets.

"They played non-stop from 7:30 p.m. until 11:30 p.m. with two full stage sets," Appalachian State graduate student Matt Hudson said.

Widespread Panic's music has been compared to the Grateful Dead and Phish. Widespread had used long instrumental jams to further separate them from comparison.

"There wasn't a lot of variation from song to song, it was mostly one long jam," Trad Crane said. "In the last song before the encore, they did have a really killer drum and percussion solo that made me get down."

The crowd was relaxed, bobbing their heads to the guitar solos, in appreciation.

"There was a great crowd and atmosphere," Joe Moyer said. "It was my first time seeing them and I would definitely go again." •Meg Letts

Hundreds of eager listeners crowded the front of the neon light stage at Legends awaiting Jump Little Children's last performance in Boone on Sept. 15.

Jump's unique sound attracted all genres of music enthusiasts with their Irish roots and rock guitars. There was little to compare them to. Proven by Matt Bivins, the band's multi-instrumentalist, as he jammed out on his harmonica to the lead guitar riffs. Fans went hysterical while they bobbed their heads with the beat.

"I've seen Jump Little Children since I was in the 6th grade, and I still enjoy watching them," Brad Corpening said.

The band always had a tight group of supporters, most of whom had been fans for years.

"Each year I see them, the crowd gets bigger," Ally White said. "I thought last year had a good turnout until tonight. It's so unfortunate that they are ending after this year."

Music resonated throughout the fall semester on campus. Various bands gaining in popularity, played for students. Each band had its own unique sound that appealed to different tastes in music. During the autumn months, students had the opportunity to attend a number of concerts lined up by Appalachian Popular Programming Society.

"It gave me something to do, broadened my horizons and exposed me to lesser-known bands," Ginny Price said.

Cover bands interpreted favorite songs from the original artists who wrote them. All playing at Legends, ZoSo jammed out to the classic rock of Led Zeppelin. Two Step blended the acoustical sounds of the Dave Matthews Band and Abbey Road honored John Lennon's birthday by remembering the songs from the album. Jump Little Children, which was not a cover band, also performed at Legends.

Tickets for the concerts at Legends matched with students' budgets, ranging from $6 to $10. Widespread Panic swept through Holmes Convocation Center, and sold out that night.

Recreation and fitness

Taking a walk along Sanford Mall on a sunny afternoon, one would notice all the students taking a break from their busy schedules and getting a little exercise. Some threw Frisbee, juggled a hacky sack or slacklined between trees.

"I love it; we try to come out here everyday," Dale Marshall said, as he bounced a hacky sack off his foot.

Besides hacky sack, also known as footbag, he enjoyed Frisbee, golf and hiking. And with all the trails and mountains, Boone was the ideal place to take a day and hike.

"I play ultimate frisbee, I run with my dog or I hike on the Parkway. I do these activities not only because they are enjoyable, but because they make me feel healthy and active," Brad Corpening said.

With a heavy gaze of concentration and balance of the mind and body, Andrew Tau carefully slacklined between two trees on Sanford Mall. He learned how to slackline in California and continued to practice his skills on campus. He enjoyed rock climbing as well.

"I do it for a couple of reasons—it helps with balance and it's a great way to meet people," Tau said.

For indoor exercising, students frequented the Quinn Recreation Center and Mt. Mitchell Life Fitness Center to run on a treadmill, lift weights, ride a stationary bike or take various fitness classes.

Appalachian State was probably one of the only campuses where slacklining, hacky sack, and frisbee were everyday scenes among students. Fitness took many different forms and students continued to find unique and appealing activities to keep themselves active. •Olivia Simeone

Mountaineer madness

Chants of encouragement echoed through the Holmes Center on Oct. 28. Doors opened at 10:30 p.m. followed by a rush of students and loyal Appalachian State University basketball fans as part the annual Mountaineer Madness.

Over 2000 rowdy fans got their first glimpse at the 2005-2006 men's basketball team. A scrimmage was played to kick-off the official basketball season.

"I am excited to see how the men's basketball team plays throughout the rest of the season. They lost a lot of good seniors. The new freshmen could be a great addition," said Mike Webber, an Appalachian student and loyal fan.

Students participated in several competitions that led up to midnight. Appalachian student, John Bateman, won a $100 gift certificate from The Library Food & Spirits after he demonstrated his appetite. Bateman ate 42 chicken wings in 10 minutes. Other prizes included t-shirts, pennants, and the popular free parking passes, for the winners of relay races, a dunking contest, and Yosef look-alikes.

What was flowered and musical and cold all over? The 2005 pep rally of course! The pep rally, themed Aloha Appalachian, was a Friday night event that included food, lip sync performances, a bon fire, fireworks and an appearance by the football team.

The pep rally was a long-planned and even longer anticipated event. Despite the chill in the air, hundreds were in attendance at Duck Pond Field.

The festivities began with the lip sync performances with over 15 groups taking the stage. Routines were varied with performances from the Math Club, Student Government Association, Greek organizations, the Asian Student Association, and many more. Each group had a mixed CD of songs to perform to. Among the artists included were Michael Jackson, Lil' John and the Eastside Boys, The Beach Boys, Ciara, Jennifer Lopez, and Black Eyed Peas. The small stage that supported flower-wearing-grass-skirted dancers changed as often as the performers did.

Sophomore Joyce Washington talked about her experience with the program. "We had practices every night for about two weeks and each practice lasted about an hour and a half. There was a lot of work involved including picking outfits, choreographing dances and choosing music. Our group chose to wear white tank tops, multi-colored grass skirts and leis around our wrists, ankles and necks."

"I thought lip sync was a lot of fun, but it was cold," senior Portia Taylor said.

The concert lasted from 6 to 9 p.m. with the Math Club taking first place followed by the Student Government Association. After the show, the crowd was warmed by a huge bonfire and entertained by fireworks. •Ashley Daniels

The day could not have been more perfect for a homecoming parade. The morning sun lit up King Street as all the floats sailed by. Participants began their route in Raley parking lot, headed up Waters Street and paraded down King Street.

The marching band pumped up the crowd, blaring their instruments and yelling "Get up off that thing!" The cheerleaders also showed their spirit and built anticipation for the homecoming game. Chancellor Kenneth E. Peacock drove by and waved to all the spectators followed by the 2005 Homecoming Court.

Each float was unique, but unified under this year's "Aloha Appalachian" theme. It was almost like the floats were tiny Hawaiian Islands, each representing the various Greeks, Resident Student Associations, and University Funded Organizations (UFOs) on campus. Creations of tiki bars, palm trees, volcanoes, flamingos, and pineapples made the crisp autumn weather seem a little more tropical. Music from the Beach Boys and the theme song from "Hawaii Five-O" played frequently, along with conga drums and the kazoo bands.

"The kazoo band was definitely the highlight of my homecoming celebration!" senior Kate Mille said.

Flowered leis were tossed to the spectators while candy was thrown all over the street.

"I'll do anything to get 'leid'!" Avery Coggeshall joked, as she grabbed some more colorful leis.

The homecoming parade was a taste of a warm, tropical paradise—showcasing school spirit and creativity. •Olivia Simone

It was a bright fall day on Monday, Oct. 31, as students carried their pumpkins to Sanford Mall for Appalachian State's annual pumpkin carving contest held each Halloween.

Students were given the freedom to arrive anytime between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. to challenge themselves against other pumpkin-carving enthusiasts. Various art skills were shown off with patterns such as witches, cats and other Halloween related forms. Not only was the carving contest a chance to show off one's skills, but it was also a social function. "It's a good way to get involved outside of your classes," said chairperson, Amanda Henson. "It's really is a great time."

Others came to observe the action between classes rather than carving or cutting.

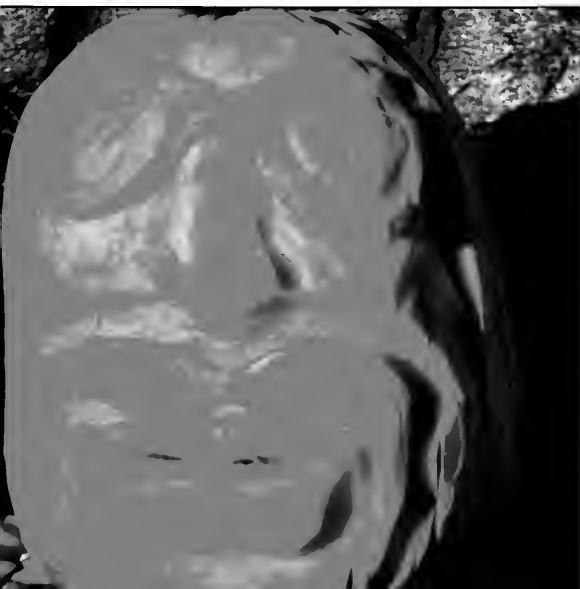

"I've seen it every year," said Amanda Phiff. "It's fun to watch even if you don't take part."

Students have enjoyed the contest each year during the Halloween season to catch the spirit of the holiday. •Meg Letts

The best part of campus

Appalachian was a fast-growing university and as a result, facilities were constantly being upgraded and built to accommodate the changes. Some students' views of the best places on campus were surprising.

"I think that White Hall is the best part of campus. It's new and it feels just like a hotel," Raven Jones said.

White Hall was the second of many dorms that underwent renovations. These new dorms became hot commodities as the years passed.

Undoubtedly, the Plemmons Student Union came up in conversations about the best parts of campus. Jeremy Osbourne backed up this claim. "I particularly love the pool hall. Crossroads is a pretty cool place to chill also."

Those who loved sports agreed with Justin Woazeah when he said, "There's no better place than Kidd Brewer Stadium on Saturday afternoon!" Kidd Brewer set records with attendance this year.

Belk Library was saved for last as the best place on campus. The new Belk Library and Information Commons peaked the interest of many students on campus. With its multiple outlets that appealed to many tastes, the Belk Library found its way to being the best part of campus.

"What can you not do in the library?" Vanessa Nunez said. •Jonathan Isom

Appalachian loft

Sleep in the city that never sleeps. Appalachian's loft, located in the heart of Manhattan on East 24th Street, had 12 bunk beds available. A student could visit with a guest anytime during the year or stay for a summer internship. Faculty members also had the opportunity to stay there for staff conferences, academic meetings or research. Nowhere else in the city could someone find a cheaper price than $35 per night. If a student was doing a summer internship, then the cost was only half of that.

The loft had a spacious living room, a kitchen nook and a seminar room.

"It looks like the 'Real World,'" Brad Norman said, who stayed there for a class trip.

Norman had free time to visit China Town, Little Italy and saw his first Broadway show. "Rent." He said he would definitely stay at the loft again because of the cheap price and good location.

Danielle Cullen also enjoyed her stay at the loft. She went with her mother for a few days over the summer.

"It was right in the middle of the city," Cullen said. "I've seen stuff in movies about New York City, but it's totally different to experience it."

She said she felt safe in the loft because everyone had to have a key and also a card to scan to get inside the living room.

For a chance to visit the "Big Apple," the App Loft provided students and faculty members the opportunity to stay in Manhattan for an unbeatable price. •Olivia Simone

[Below] The App House is located at 622 North Carolina Avenue. It was a great place to stay and visit many memorials and sites of Washington, DC.

While the Appalachian House in Washington, D.C. was under renovation, no one could make reservations until Feb. 1. It had been closed from September to February.

"A lot of people have tried to make reservations, but it's just not ready yet," Buckley Freeman from the Office of Business Affairs said before renovations were complete.

The University purchased a new house there two years ago. It was a four-story townhouse that could accommodate 26 people. There were 22 beds available and two private rooms which could hold two people each. The bunk rates were $35 a night and the private rooms were $75 a night. There was also a common room and a kitchen for guests.

The App House was reserved for students and faculty. Alumni and other people who weren't affiliated with the University were also allowed to make reservation requests. While in Washington, D.C., guests had the opportunity to visit a plethora of museums, galleries and memorials.

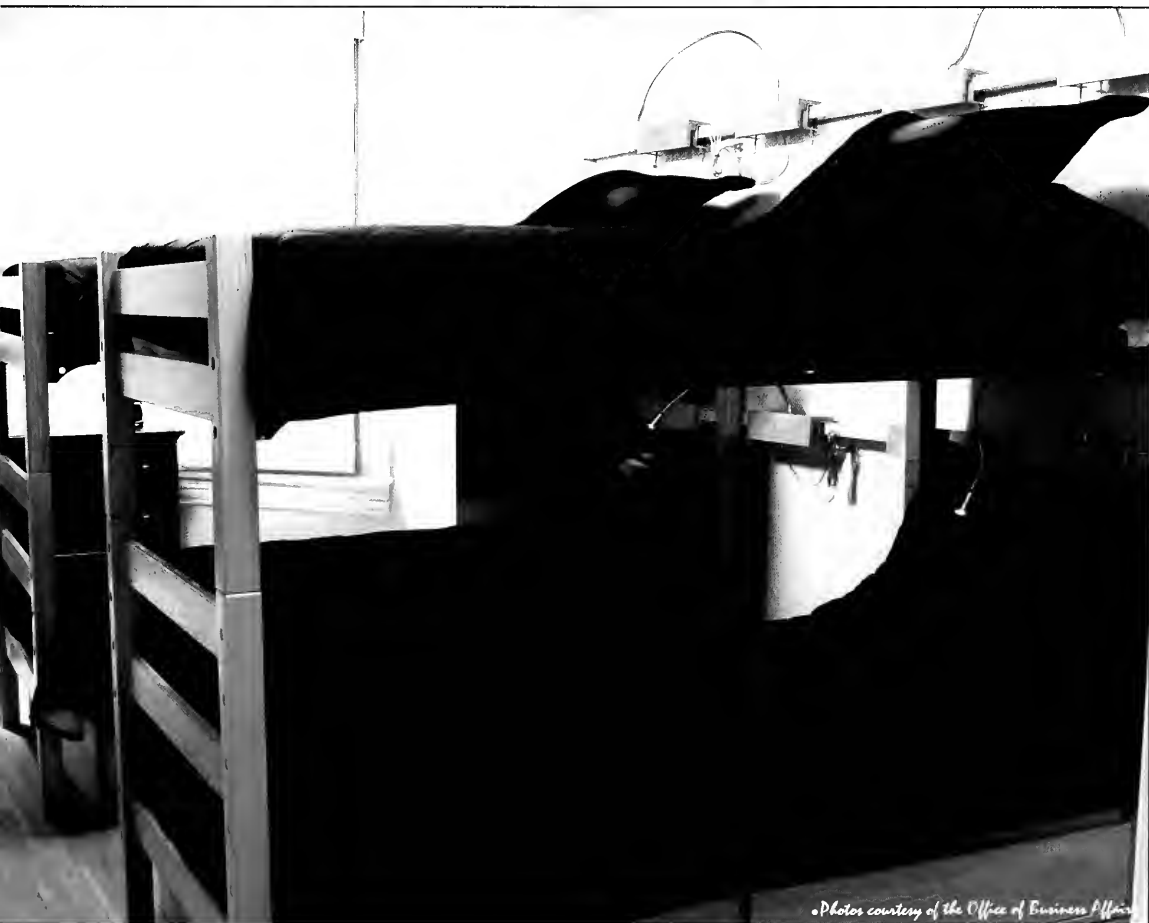

Freeman said that everything had to be renovated in order to make it suitable for guests. Although people had to be patient, it was worth the wait. ●Olivia Simeone

Weekend &

It had been long-debated among students as to what exactly there was to “do” in Boone on weekends. It would have been more productive to try to shave Yosef’s beard than attempt to find entertainment in Boone. Students spent many a day lamenting the ghosts of weekends past. There were, however, students who found fun, or at least fruitful, things to do on weekends. These mountaineers brought new meaning to the phrase “If you’re bored then you’re boring.”

Senior Jocelyn Wyatt had been in the game for a while, literally. This past year the basketball player hardly had time to even notice that weekends had arrived.

“I’m so busy all the time. For our team, the weekends start early and end late. We practice on Fridays, wake up early on Saturdays and go play, then practice again on Sunday to get ready for the next week.” When asked what she did with her free weekends, Wyatt laughed. “Free? Free weekends don’t usually happen.”

Sophomore Katie Norton, who hailed from the Wilmington area, said that hiking and partying made up just about every weekend for her. “I live so far away that I don’t really go home except on university breaks,” Norton said. “Most weekends are just spent with friends.”

From sophomore year on up most students had already familiarized themselves with their surroundings. Freshmen, however, were often said to “suitcase college.” This meant that out of homesickness they would only live at the university during the weekdays. When Friday afternoon rolled around they would be out the door and on the road home. However, freshman Travis Kelly had no such condition.

“Sometimes I go home, but usually I just party with friends or hang out with my girlfriend. I am involved with enough clubs and organizations on campus that are active through both weeks and weekends so I never really have an excuse to be bored.” •Ashley Daniels ## activities

At one point or another every student had heard the stories. Tales of disenchanted ghosts and graphic suicides circulated through residence halls like the RAs on night rounds. To every unfounded rumor however, there were at least a dozen real firsthand accounts of incidents that had happened in, or were related to, residence halls. Though conditions and vibes varied from hall to hall, one thing was certain - those who resided in residence halls and lived to tell about it usually had a story worth listening to.

Senior Jason Mendenhall recounted one crazy night he and some friends had his freshman year. "It was spring semester and we lived in the Gardner/Coltrane area right in front of Trivette. Since it was the end of the year, there were a bunch of cardboard boxes lying outside of the hall. Some buddies and I decided we would catch a duck and take it up to our floor and show our friends. So we got one of the boxes and actually caught a duck, but when we went into the building we got so much attention that pretty soon the RA knew something was up and made us take the duck back."

Though hers was from a different school, resident assistant Emily Steinbaugh of Coffey Hall had a similar animalistic story to tell. "I was an RA at the School of Science and Math and we had a squirrel climb through the window of one of my residents and he wouldn't leave! We were all freaking out because it was a psychotic squirrel. We called maintenance and they couldn't catch him. Finally on the third day of having him in the room, me and a group of three other girls went in to catch him. He would act crazy and the girls would run out of the room... we had to regroup often - it was a nightmare!"

However wild and crazy the halls could be, there were always peers and committed RAs to keep students grounded.

"One of the most memorable times in my career as an RA/RD is when I learned that [East Hall RA] Leigh-Lane Edwards died," Erin Schlegel, RD for Hoey Hall said. "She was the most involved person I knew. She was very active in everything and very concerned with the welfare of other people and will be greatly remembered and missed."

Where's the Snow seemed to disappear during December and January. Not one snowflake had fallen during the beginning of spring semester. Students walked to class without even wearing a jacket.

When it did happen though, snow had the power to bring out the inner-child in students - snowball fights, sledding, making snow angels, building snowmen, and whatever else students came up with.

"Playing in our bathing suits in the snow, throwing snowballs at friends and frolicking around," Jamic Price said she and her friends enjoyed doing.

There were also games of destroying snowmen.

"And not just any snowmen, the other team's snowmen," Noah Niwinski said.

Edible treats were made out of snow too. Macon Lowman said she and few friends put snow in cups and poured coke over it.

"I've done that once, but it's probably really bad for you," Lowman joked.

It began with the classic song "Take Me Home Tonight" by Eddie Money, and ended with many Appalachian State University students jumping, singing, and dancing to their favorite eighties music. Mighty McFly, an eighties cover band, started off slowly, but ended the night successfully on Jan. 24.

In velour red suits, maroon leather pants, sequins, and retro goggles, Mighty McFly put on an event that left the audience singing at the top of their lungs. The band aimed to involve their audience. The lead singer stage-dived off speakers, walked on railings, and had conversations with fans, as well as provided eighties music fans a chance to borrow the microphones and sing their favorite verses.

"Mighty McFly was professional and I enjoyed their interaction with the audience," said Matthew Short, an eighties music fan and media broadcasting major. "They seemed to really enjoy being there."

During the concert, students threw their arms around each other, swaying and shouting with the familiar lyrics, more proof that Mighty McFly was a crowd pleaser. —Meg Letts

Duncan Sheik, known for his hit song, "Barely Breathing," performed Jan. 17, at Legends. Anxious concert goers waited outside until doors opened at 9 p.m.

Duncan Sheik's music was an orchestral mix of alternative and contemporary rock. Duncan Sheik hit his peak as an acclaimed musician in 1996 with his first album.

Sheik's stage was set with dim lights and tables for seating, as opposed to most Legends concerts that require fans to stand. Upon entrance, the guests took their seats of choice, sat back and relaxed, awaiting the Duncan Sheik experience. The poetic lyrics induced a calming spell for fans, creating an almost coffee-house atmosphere.

"I liked the atmosphere; it suited his music," said junior, Ginny Price. "We sat down rather than standing, which made a difference in how I perceived the music. It was more comfortable."

Duncan Sheik made his appearance at Appalachian State University's campus successfully. Students were impressed with his smooth song transitions and on-stage personality.

"I was never a big Duncan Sheik fan, but after hearing his music live, I have gained further appreciation for his work," said student Doug Haneline.

Circle up everybody, because square dancing came to Legends once a month. An evening of bluegrass music set the ideal atmosphere. A band of banjos, violins and cellos played catchy tunes such as "Shoot That Pretty Girl Home to Me" and "Dig for the Clam. Shoot for the Hole in the Ol' Tin Can." Students rounded up and tried to coordinate the promenading, swinging and turning that's traditional of square dancing.

"I always enjoy it. It's so much fun and it's really easy," Mecca Jackson, the chairperson of the Appalachian Heritage Council, said.

A version of hands-on learning was applied. The lead singer narrated what to do throughout the entire song so no one would be confused. Sometimes partners collided, went in the wrong direction or had no idea what was happening, but they just laughed it off as they tried.

"It's kind of a work out," Cody Wilkins said.

The crowd was small in numbers, but that made for more room on the floor to square dance all night. ●Olivia Simone

Appalachian State University offered a variety of opportunities for student employment to further school involvement. Students could take advantage of on-campus jobs close to their housing.

The Student Government Association assisted in campus politics, funding, the Tunnel of Oppression, and homecoming activities.

"I like being on the inside," said Samuel Lev, SGA treasurer. "The Student Government Association does a lot more than the average student considers."

The Quinn Center and Mt. Mitchell Life Fitness Center were two popular student employment choices. Both gyms were considered a social outing where students gathered to work out for healthier living and share stories with their friends from the weekend.

Instructors, front desk assistants, and weight room supervisors were a necessity.

"I like working at the Quinn Center and surrounding myself with all my friends," said front desk worker, Macon Lowman. "Every time I am working I see someone I know."

"It's gonna blow the socks off the students," was the response given by Mr. Joe Carter, Director of University Recreation when asked what the new UREC center would bring to Appalachian. Students, faculty and members of the surrounding community steadily eyed the progress of the highly anticipated Student Recreation Center since the 2003 contract was written allowing the center to be built.

Students were slightly disappointed fall semester to find that the athletic and swimming classes they'd registered for in the fall of 2005 would not be available because of construction work on both gymnasiums. Due to asbestos, parts of Broome-Kirk Gym were closed off to students and populated by construction workers and loud machinery. As a result, student schedules were altered, classes were moved and some students were more than slightly disappointed.

Senior Erika Farmer spent her "swimming classes"

playing basketball and volleyball during time intended for the pool.

Despite frustrations with time and opening dates, those who visited the center readily agreed that it was worth the wait. The massive building equipped with a juice/smoothie bar, climbing wall, cardio room, weight room, training rooms, basketball and tennis courts, and a rubberized synthetic sport court approved by the United States Volleyball Association was a welcomed change to the often-crowded Quinn Center and the smaller Mt. Mitchell Life Fitness Center.

Mr. Carter, who had worked in recreation for 22 years, spoke excitedly about the new center that opened more than 230 employment positions for students to work in the recreational department. Speaking specifically of the 50-foot climbing wall that offers more than 11 different paths, he said, "There's not a better one east of the Mississippi." •Ashley Daniels Brave souls plunged into the shocking cold waters of Duck Pond on a chilly February day. They did this not for pleasure, but to raise money for the Special Olympics. Although the sun was shining, it didn't make the atmosphere any warmer.

Crowds of people gathered to observe this absurd event. Groups of plungers showed off their flair for fashion as if they were models in a fashion show.

"This has been passed down from generations," Wes Flowers said as he flaunted a teal, one-piece woman's bathing suit.

Besides flaunting their stuff on the 'duck-walk,' they pumped themselves up for a brisk jump into the pond.

Good-luck remarks such as "don't drown!" kept spirits high.

"Belly flops and stretching is key," David Cat said in discussing his strategy.

Masses of people cheered wildly for the shivering bodies immersed in the water. Tall spectators had a huge advantage over the shorter ones, who stood on their tiptoes to catch a glance.

"Once you hit, it's cold, but it really wasn't that bad," Whitney Shoemaker, dripping wet, said.

The days of Dec. 10, 2005, May 6, 2006, and May 7, 2006 could not have arrived any sooner for some graduates and may have arrived too soon for others. Either way they were joyous days for some 2,700 students. Over the course of those three days the 6 colleges, Reich College of Education, Cratis D. Williams Graduate School, Walker College of Business, College of Fine & Applied Arts, Miriam Cannon Hayes School of Music, and College of Arts and Sciences, had 2 graduations each. Guest speakers included Erskine Bowles, Richard Moore, Maj. Dale Collie, Robert Glidden, and Roy Cooper. Five of the graduations took place in the Holmes Convocation Center and one took place in Broyhill Music Center.

Awards of Every spring, Walker College of Business recognized four professors who demonstrated excellence in teaching, service and research. The awards dinner last April honored Dr. Harry Davis, Dr. Richard Pouder, Dr. Ivan Roten, and Dr. Leigh Dunston.

"I don't believe there is any higher recognition a faculty member can receive," Dr. Harry Davis, who received the Faculty Award for Excellence in teaching, said.

His teacher evaluations and letters of support from students and faculty helped earn him the award. He taught courses mostly in banking and was both honored and pleased to know that his teaching was recognized as excellent.

When Dr. Leigh Dunston was awarded for teaching, he was truly shocked. He didn't think that within the mere four years of teaching, he would have received this award. Originally a lawyer, he shifted to teaching courses in business ethics, international business transactions, and negotiation and legal environment of business.

"This is something I wanted to do for many years, so when I got the award it was especially surprising," Dunston said.

Dr. Richard Pouder, who taught strategic management, won the award for his publicized research on business restructuring, management of technology and innovation and competition of companies in geographic clusters.

"It's nice to see you're rewarded for hard work," Pouder said.

The service award recognized Dr. Ivan Roten, who created six new scholarships within the College of Business, developed a financial planning center and was an advisor for the Financial Student Association. He felt it "was very much of an honor," and he was pleased that his hard work was rewarded.

The Walker College of Business set their students up for a successful future with the help of dean Randy Edwards. The business program offered ten undergraduate majors that included a new addition, international business.

According to Edwards, the most popular majors were marketing and general business. Many students were offered jobs from major companies such as BB&T, Wachovia and Bank of America.

Business internships provided several exciting travel opportunities. Appalachian students interned in popular tourist spots such as the Caribbean, with a focus on hospitality and management.

The College of Business also offered the opportunity for students to educate themselves through the Martha Guy Summer Institute, a summer program for further exploration in business. This institute was for rising college students who wanted to gain exposure to the basic principles of business while building leadership skills.

The Walker College of Business was a highly applauded department that left business students with countless opportunities in their careers of choice. •Meg Letts

Appalachian State's Entrepreneur Summit was sponsored by the Walker College of Business. This event has been held annually for four years. Students on and off campus, entrepreneurs, faculty, and people from across the Boone community came to learn and participate in the event.

Entrepreneurs and business owners came from near and far to partake in panels, bestow information to participants and to judge the "Pitch Your Idea in 90 Seconds" competition.

"The goal for this event was to come up with an idea for a business and to present it in 90 seconds," said senior marketing major Ryan Barry. "There was a cash prize for the person who presented the best idea and presentation. There were over 150 entries and the top 20 ideas were chosen to be presented at the summit."

The business and entrepreneur representation was as varied as the students' ideas. Discussions ranged from advice on small businesses, large businesses, world businesses, ethics and legal issues, customer service, startup challenges, business on the web, self-evaluation, along with shared past experiences. Delegates came from all over including a number of local businesses. Boone Take-Out Express, Backyard Burgers, Marble Slab Creamery, The Wildflower Restaurant, and Bare Essentials Natural Market were all local Boone businesses that were represented.

Barry, who participated in the Summit as a student moderator, said of the event, "I really enjoyed it, instead of just listening to someone stand in front of you and lecture, reading a textbook or even copying notes off of an overhead, you actually got the chance to interact with the presenters and see where they were coming from. I was able to ask questions and see the things they are faced with and their worries and concerns for the future."

Mr. Bryan Toney, an administrator and management lecturer, commented on the summit. "This one day event could be used almost as a crash course in entrepreneurship for a student interested in starting and owning a business. It is an excellent opportunity to learn from the experts and make contacts that could be helpful down the road." •Ashley Daniels

The College of Fine and Applied Arts housed a huge spectrum of interests ranging from fine art, theater and dance, technology, communication, family and consumer sciences, health, leisure and exercise science, and military science and leadership. Each department was unique, but unified under the college. Grouping the applied sciences with the arts created a special blend that was unparalleled by other colleges.

"One can go to a dedication of a windmill for our alternative energy program in the morning, a presentation of a scientific finding about nutrition and exercise in the afternoon and to a theatrical production in the evening and never leave the confines of our own college," Dr. J. Mark Estepp, Professor and dean, said. "Being involved in our full college allows us the opportunity to experience extremely diverse activities, events, programs and scholarships."

A wide variety of majors provided a wide variety of classes as well. What appealed to one student may not have appealed to the next. For example, some interesting art classes were "Serigraphy," "Jewelry Design" and "Intro to the NYC/Washington Art Scene." Theater and dance classes included "Costuming," "Stage Combat" and "Pilates and Choreography." Some interesting communications classes offered were "Media Graphics," "Specialized Reporting," "Crisis Communication," and "Internet Communication."

In the applied sciences popular classes included "Biomechanics," "Smoking Cessation," "Chronic Disease Management," and "Exercise Prescription." Technology courses included "Digital Electronics," "Sustainable Building Design/Construction" and "Network Administration."

“Being involved in our full college allows us the opportunity to experience extremely diverse activities, events, programs, and scholarships.”

The most popular majors were electronic media/broadcasting, construction technology and physical education. After graduation, students developed into independent artists, art teachers, nutritionists, athletic trainers, dance teachers, camp directors/owners, advertising sales associates along with a variety of others. There were students who studied painting, sculpture and clay, while other students studied physiology, organic chemistry and biology; however, both would graduate under the College of Fine and Applied Arts. •Olivia Simone

Work study

Work study had a misleading name — it involved work, but not study. Formally called the Federal Work Study program, it was designed to employ students who qualified for financial aid.

With over 300 positions available on campus, students could work at the library, various academic departments, Plemmons Student Union, or Student Health Services. The financial aid office provided applications to students and they were required to complete a FAFSA form as well. If they qualified, students were assigned a position through the Student Employment office. Off-campus jobs had to be private non-profit organizations or public agencies since the money came from the federal budget.

Students could use the money they earned for books, tuition or anything else they needed for school. The Federal Work Study program gave students the opportunity to finance their education while receiving job experience as well. •Olivia Simone

Glass was like a rose - delicate and fragile, but sharp and thorn-like. Carelessness caused it to shatter, making it impossible to mend. Students challenged themselves to use glass as a medium in Junichiro Baba's special topics art class entitled Hot Glass. He only taught this course this year, but hoped to leave an impression on students. The course was not limited to art majors so anyone could register for the course as an elective.

Students presented their final two projects the last day of fall semester. One project consisted of smaller glass forms and the other consisted of larger glass forms.

One of Erin Souther's projects was a miniature tree and she named it "What I want to be when I grow up." Tiny trinkets of things she wanted to be when she was younger dangled from the branches. The critique allowed students to receive positive criticism from the professor and their classmates. Baba provided insightful comments for each student's artwork. He genuinely wanted every student to have a learning experience from his class.

"I think glass is a beautiful art form in itself," Jennifer Livingston said when Baba asked what her perspective on glass was.

Her glass form was of the female figure. She explained that she loved the classic body form and wanted to recreate that through glass.

"I'm actually taking this course again in the spring because I really enjoyed it," Souther said.

Watauga college

Watauga College was described as a college within a college with all the benefits of a small school, surrounded by a large campus environment. All Appalachian facilities were open to Watauga students for unlimited use.

Watauga College was built in 1972 as a part of the Department of Interdisciplinary Studies. The college was a community and its purpose was to create a mix of leaders consisting of athletes, environmentalists, thespians, creative writers, and honor students who were studying the humanities, social sciences and English courses.

Housed in the Living Learning Center, students learned and grew together as their close living quarters created strong bonds.

“Housed in the Living Learning Center, students learned and grew together as their close living quarters created strong bonds.”

Watauga College looked for students with potential to think “outside the box,” and to challenge the norms with creative thinking. There was no invitation required, only an application and an enthusiastic desire to be part of the college.

Watauga College was one of a kind in bringing students together to develop a tight bond off each others’ ideas and influences. •Meg Letts

Seeking to “cultivate the habits of inquiry, learning and service among all of its constituents,” the College of Arts and Sciences moved into the year looking to continue its mission for excellence. The college continued its success as the largest on campus with over 4,000 undergraduate declared majors enrolled in 2005-2006. The College of Arts and Sciences’ 16 departments, according to newly appointed Dean Dr. Robert Lyman, was responsible for over half of the education received by students this year. With over 100 undergraduate majors, the college offered 60 scholarships to qualifying students in all areas of interests. The most popular majors offered through the college included psychology, political science/criminal justice, biology and sociology.

The College of Arts and Sciences experienced many changes along with the introduction of new programs. The college introduced new courses in the field of enology, the study of wine, due to the rising interest in wine making. The college also experienced facility upgrades with the completion of Rankin South science building. Rankin West experienced renovations as laboratories and classes were added. Future enhancements included the old Belk Library as the location of the Political Science/Criminal Justice Department, as its former location at Whitener Hall was to be turned into a parking deck. The Smith-Wright building also experienced renovations to help centralize the department of psychology.

The College of Arts and Sciences hosted many programs, seminars, and conferences throughout the year. “We would like to continue our high quality education, expand the curriculum, and bridge the gap with out-of-classroom learning,” Dr. Lyman stated.

Hayes School of music

Hayes School of Music offered a wide variety of music-influenced careers, under the supervision of Dean William G. Harbinson.

The School of Music had classes in the art of teaching, creating and the business of music. Such majors included performance, education, music therapy, and music industry studies.

More than 475 undergraduates were enrolled and each student was offered the opportunity to participate in numerous vocal or musical performances. More than 150 ensemble concerts and solo recitals were performed a year.

“Graduates from the School of Music were very successful and well prepared in vocal careers, operas, management and recording industries.”

Several graduate programs, including a Master of Music and Master of Music Therapy, were also offered. Music therapy was a unique program that dealt with using music to heal emotional and physical ailments.

Graduates from the School of Music were very successful and well prepared in vocal careers, operas, management and recording industries. Some of the graduates were even offered jobs in Nashville, known for its music scene.

“I think the faculty and staff of the School of Music have helped to prepare me for any career I might wish to pursue involving music,” Kristen Felts said. “The classes were fun and challenging.” •Meg Letts

Oct. 5 marked the rare date of having "the President's own" band play at Farthing Auditorium. The U.S. Marine Band only toured once every five years, so the concert was a memorable performance. Historically, the band performed for the inauguration of Thomas Jefferson and had played for every following inauguration since. The musicians appeared at the White House more than 300 times a year to play for State dinners, receptions, South Lawn arrival ceremonies or to accompany famous entertainers.

"It makes the small town of Boone feel important," Kevin Bowes said.

The band ignited the stage with a traditional performance of The Star Spangled Banner. A full auditorium arose from their seats to honor our national anthem. The red, white and blue uniforms of the musicians matched the patriotism they undeniably symbolized. Every brass instrument shone like a star and each musician made them sound even brighter. Accompanied by the rhythm of the drums, the band united to showcase their musical talent. Lt. Col. Michael J. Colburn conducted, blending every instrument together in perfect harmony. Each selection had the purpose of establishing what it was to be an American. The music resonated images of triumph, liberty, honor and those who have fought for our country. •Olivia Simeone

The Hayes School of Music held its Annual Holiday Scholarship Concert on Dec. 2 in Farthing Auditorium. The event was held every year with the proceeds going to the Hayes School of Music Scholarship. The concert featured performances by students, alumni, and local musicians. The ASU Gospel Choir also participated. This event was very captivating as the sounds of music filled the auditorium. There were some beautiful performances by students that left the audience giving standing ovations. Both vocal and musical performances were featured in the program.

Dr. William G. Harbinson was excited and pleased with the program and the attendance. "It's great to see that people appreciate music and we were able to give them quite a show!" • Johnathon Isom

Marching Overseas

Members of the Marching Band celebrated the New Year by playing in the London New Year's Day Parade. It was the largest event of its kind and there was a street audience of more than one million people. The band stayed from Dec. 28 to Jan. 4. Aside from traveling to away football games, this was their first major performance and their first time out of the country.

“Aside from traveling to away football games, this was their first major performance and their first time out of the country.”

“We hope to represent our school and the country as well as we can,” Dr. Scott Tobias, associate director of bands, said.

While they were there, they performed two concerts. The first was the televised New Year's Day Parade and the second was an indoor concert of Appalachian's 50-piece wind ensemble.

Besides playing for huge audiences, they got to be tourists as well. They enjoyed guided tours of London, Windsor Castle, Stonehenge, and the town of Bath. Free time was also available to do whatever they pleased.

They were recommended by groups from previous years to play in the parade.

“We have an anonymous person to thank for that,” Tobias said. •Olivia Simeone

Appalachian State University started out as a small teaching college over 100 years ago and has grown to be the second largest teacher-education program in the University of North Carolina system, boasting 2,000 students, undergraduate and graduate. Ninety-nine percent of graduates seeking employment in North Carolina successfully obtained licensure to teach in the state's public school system. The success rate was linked to various programs that helped students prepare early in their college years.

"Employers know which students have come from ASU because they are prepared and know what to do," Charles Duke, dean of the College of Education, said.

Students gained valuable field experience during their sophomore year. The ASU public school partnership covered eight school districts and 115 schools, which provided sites for student teachers and interns. Because of this, ASU also led the UNC system for having the most off-campus programs in teacher education. The college usually offered 90 courses a year that required direct instruction at off-campus sites, and enrolled about 1,000 students in those courses each year.

“The ASU public school partnership covered eight school districts and 115 schools, which provided sites for student teachers and interns.”

The most popular major within the college was elementary education, followed by the middle grades and history education. Post-graduates looking for teaching jobs were treasured like gold in North Carolina. Each year the state attempts to hire approximately 11,000 new teachers, with ASU producing about 3,500 teachers a year. The largest employer of post-graduates lied in the Winston Salem area along with the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system.

From generation to generation, the Reich College of Education has continued to develop genuine teachers that were well-prepared to educate and impact the lives of others.

"I enjoy working with people to meet the needs of public schools," Duke said. "The greatest thing is to continue to make our program stronger and better." —Olivia Simone

Reich College of education

Rreich College of Education, also known as the RCOE, prepared education students for future careers in teaching through the student teaching program.

Education majors were required to student teach during their last full semester as a requirement for graduation. To be eligible, students had to complete all prerequisites that included diversity, reading, science, and math. A cumulative GPA of 2.0 was also required.

Student teachers were asked several questions when they filled out their student teaching application. These questions included what activities influenced them to be a teacher, what goals do they have as a teacher and what should be accomplished to bring improvement to our nation's educational system.

Once the application process was complete, students were able to request placements for their semester of student teaching. Students were given the opportunity to teach in Watauga County or surrounding county schools, while many chose to teach closer to their hometown if eligible.

Wine appreciation

Not to be confused with a wine "tasting" class, the newest addition to Appalachian's course load, Appreciation and Understanding of Wine, left students with a sweet taste in their mouths.

Recently introduced to the University in spring of 2006, the Appreciation and Understanding of Wine came with quite a few misconceptions. Many students and some faculty immediately associated the class with wine sampling, and therefore wrote the course off as a joke. However, it was anything but.

Junior chemistry major Hank Trogon talked about the controversial class. "I needed a chemistry elective so I decided it would be an interesting class. It was a cross-disciplinary as well as a multi-cultural designator so it covered a lot of areas."

The class focused on wine, as it was relevant in history, literature, religion, science, economics, social settings, and careers. Through PowerPoint slide shows and detailed historical and personal accounts, Dr. Lucian Georgescu informed his students of the many venues related to wine. Dr. Georgescu often shared uncommon facts with his students. During one class discussing the history of wine, he explained, "At one time wine was safer than water, treatments like chlorine were not yet discovered and the sterilizing properties of wine made it safe to drink. In some parts of India, the people burned the dead then put their bodies in the rivers, making their water unsafe to drink. These people would either mix their water with wine or drink pure wine."

"When I was scheduled for the class, I didn't know what to expect, but I enjoyed Dr. Georgescu. He was well-read and very knowledgeable...overall it's an interesting class."

The class, though considered somewhat eccentric, was a fresh source of knowledge for those who experience it.

"Before the class started I didn't know what to expect, but I really enjoy Dr. Georgescu. He is well-read and very knowledgeable. So far it has been an interesting class," Trogon said. ●Ashley Daniels

Learning communities

Learning communities, a vital and active part of the academic community on campus, continued to thrive with around 85 percent of Appalachian students participating in some type of learning community. The impact of these groups was far-reaching.

These communities were established to ease the transition from high school to college. Varied in arrangement, some communities allowed groups of students to be enrolled in two or three classes together that focused on a specific theme, academic major or discipline. Others were designed so that students would live together in the same residence hall while taking classes together.

Programs such as Summer Preview provided an opportunity for students to start college early and earn six semester hours during summer school. Summer Preview exposed students to campus cultural programs, service learning opportunities and leadership and involvement activities.

Freshman learning communities were also common and almost every first semester student that was enrolled in Freshman Seminar took multiple classes with the same group of students.

Sophomore interior design major Lindsey Borkowski commented positively on her experience with her freshman learning community. "I was in an interior design community and I really enjoyed it. Everyone in the community was enrolled in three classes together, including Freshman Seminar. It gave me the chance to meet a lot of new people as well as see some interesting things. We took a bunch of trips to the Turchin Center as well as Gallery Nine, an art gallery owned by my instructor's wife. The community gave me a lot of opportunities I would not have had otherwise."

Administrator Nikki Crees spoke on the purpose of learning communities. "The purpose of the communities is to make it easier for students to form study groups and integrate class materials while making friends, exploring majors, and discovering potential career choices." •Ashley Daniels

[Right] Stacey Freeman holds about fourteen books she has to purchase. The rental textbook program is great for general education classes but it seems the more in-depth students get into their majors, the more books they actually have to purchase. ●Dan Hoad

[Below] On Wednesday, Jan. 13 WASU, Appalachian's student-run radio station, was out to entertain the massive lines of student waiting for books. ●Dan Hoad

"To buy or not to buy..." For many students it seemed like a pretty ridiculous question. Though students readily agreed that textbooks were necessary in the University system, very few were willing to pay the full price it took to own them.

For numerous students, the rental system played a major part in their choosing to attend the University. Students were attracted to the appeal of renting their books for the duration of their classes and then returning them at the end of the semester.

The system, which was established at Appalachian in 1938, would allow students to pay a small fee (about $78) each semester in exchange for the textbooks required for their courses. The program made available otherwise expensive books for a nominal cost, therefore putting a significant dent in the already staggering cost of education.

"I think the rental program is an overall good system," senior Donny Wisor said. "Using the rental system as well as other discount avenues has allowed me to spend around $115-$120 on books that would have otherwise been around $400+ dollars."

Although advantages of the system appeared plentiful enough, some professors were opposed to, as well as frustrated by, it. Certain members of the faculty argued that the system created a kind of educational confinement that should not exist within the University system. Professors asserted that if students were to purchase their own books each semester it would in turn give them more chance to explore their options among educational resources instead of simply settling for what the rental system had available.

History professor Dr. H.L. Bond shared his opinion. "I think the rental system is okay to use in the beginning courses; large expensive textbooks that students are required to have, but will never be used again should not have to be purchased, however, when students reach the upper level courses, the knowledge from the textbooks will more than likely benefit them in relation to their major and those books students should purchase."

"Using the rental system as well as other discount avenues has allowed me to spend around $115-$120 on books that would have otherwise been around $400+ dollars."

When asked her opinion on the rental system, senior and former Student Government Association worker, Lelia Ghannad commented, "I think they should spend more money on hiring runners to speed up the process. If they can spend a million dollars on a football field, surely they can spend a few hundred on more runners for the bookstore. Otherwise, I think the rental system is no longer necessary when students reach 3rd and 4th level classes. The professors who picked those books choose them for a reason, more than likely students will need them later on." •Ashley Daniels

Renting textbooks is a long and tedious process. Students stood in line for more than two hours at peak moments in the day. Once the books were in their hands it was a sigh of relief. •Dan Hood

Bigger and better

This year, Appalachian held the grand opening of the new Belk Library and Information Commons. The new library was a result of a major funding project from the school, state and private contributors. The grand opening was preceded by the book move, which served as a ceremony for an 'out with the old, in with the new' look on the transporting of the materials. The new library created quite a buzz around campus with its improved computer lab and potential projects such as a cyber café. Hours were extended in an effort to help students study and perform assignments.

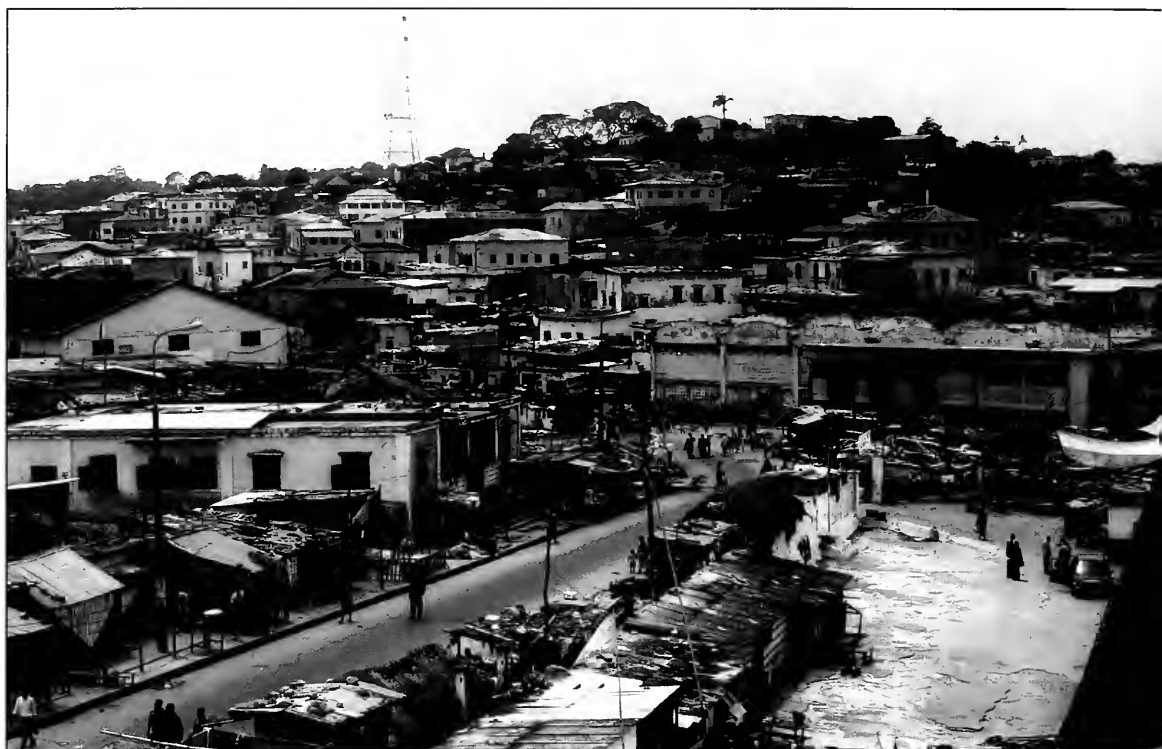

"I'm glad that we have a library with upgraded equipment and facilities," noted Dustin Wright.

The library featured five floors of multiple facilities and equipment to aid students and faculty in their research. Some of the features included the Music Library and the special collections featuring archives and University records, stock car collections, and the Appalachian Collection.

"I'm glad that we have a library with upgraded equipment and facilities."

Many students found the library to be an excellent place for study and relaxing, according to Lenniah Salters. "The library is a quiet scene for me. I love to study or just read a good book there."

Professors also incorporated the Belk Library into their curriculum using the expanded computer lab and many electronic media rooms. The university planned to continue to add on new projects to the Belk Library per the desire to have a top-grade facility. •Jonathan Isom

The World at Your fingertips

New Zealand, Japan, Spain, China...places so far away, but made closer by the Study Abroad program. A student could study classical art in Italy, archaeology in Peru, physics in Switzerland or whatever appealed to the student's tastes. Any student that maintained a 2.75 GPA was eligible to have the world at his or her fingertips.

Expenses included travel, insurance, food, and administrative costs. Most of the overseas programs matched Appalachian's tuition. However, some overseas programs were more expensive than others. Cost mostly depended on which country the student wanted to travel to. To help ease the costs, students could apply for financial aid and/or apply for scholarships if needed.

If interested, a student could meet with a study abroad advisor and obtain an application. The next step would be to get a passport. The student would then be ready to look at an exotic culture, learn a language and experience life far away from campus. •Olivia Simone

Graduate student Brent Sommerville was accepted to present topics on wind technology in Pittsburgh, PA from June 4 through June 7 at the annual WINDPOWER Conference. He submitted an abstract along with about 350 others, but only one-third was accepted to present.

"It's a huge deal," Sommerville said.

His goal was to install wind turbines with increased efficiency and decreased breakage. His topic for the conference revolved around that concept of increased reliability. He did a huge portion of his research on Beech Mountain and based his abstract upon his observations.

At the conference, he had hopes of networking with professionals to potentially map out his career. He had never been to Pittsburgh before, but this was not his first time attending the WINDPOWER Conference. He traveled to Denver last year where it was held and was excited to be able to present in Pittsburgh.

Rare Book

Students at Appalachian State University had the opportunity to take a journey into the pages of 16th century literature. The rare book collection had been recently added to the improved Belk Library that opened spring semester.

On the fourth floor of the library, you could surround yourself with leather bound, hand-illustrated books ranging from 1675, to the early 19th century. Each book had been preserved in a specific temperature of 60 degrees, and a humidity of 50 degrees to keep the antiques from rotting or being torn.

Bill and Maureen Rhinehart donated a large collection of old English literature. Some included the titles, "Disposition of Richard II" and "Ferdinand and Isabella." Both books were handmade with linen and cotton to create the pages. Each book was it's own piece of artwork.

Beyond old English collections was the children's collection, donated by Pat Farthing. The psychology collection, known as the Dai collection, was also found in the rare book room.

"What makes a book rare isn't just the published date, but the amount of books in that collection," Hal Keiner, rare book supervisor said. "The sum of the number of books becomes greater than the part."

“What makes a book rare isn't just the published date, but the amount of books in that collection. The sum of the number of books becomes greater than the part.”

Belk's rare book collection was brought to Appalachian State University to develop a greater interest in old literature for students - specifically english, science, and education majors. With the help of the new library, students were able to satisfy their curiosity of history through the use of the rare book collection. •Meg Letts

Best Value

The University shined in the spotlight this year for being named a “Best Value” campus by Kiplinger’s Magazine. The February issue evaluated data from 500 public four-year universities in order to make a list of the top 100. Cheap tuition was not the only factor—the magazine searched for the universities with high-quality academics at affordable rates. Appalachian State ranked 33rd on the list, trailing closely behind UNC Wilmington at 32nd and North Carolina State at 28th.

“I was pleased Kiplinger’s researchers found what all of us at Appalachian already knew—the faculty and staff at Appalachian State offer top-quality academic programs at affordable prices,” said Chancellor Kenneth E. Peacock.

First, Kiplinger’s Magazine analyzed academic quality by examining the portion of the 2004-2005 incoming freshman that scored 600 or higher on the verbal or math sections of the SATs, admission rates, freshman retention rates, student-faculty ratios and four- and six-year graduation rates. ASU had an admission rate of 68 percent, a student-faculty ratio of 19:1 and 30 percent of the incoming freshman who scored highly on the SATs.

Next, the magazine ranked each university by cost and financial aid. The in-state tuition for ASU was $9,121 per year and the out-of-state tuition was $14,488 per year. After financial aid, the in-state costs were valued at $5,228 and the out-of-state costs were valued at $14,595. ASU ranked third for having the lowest in-state tuition costs, falling behind the New Mexico Institute for Mining and Technology and the Mississippi University for Women.

A blend of high-quality academics and affordable rates made ASU not just a “Best Value” campus, but a valuable gem uncovered for its worthiness.

“It sure is nice when others discover what those of us at Appalachian State have known for a long time. Indeed, we have a university in which we can all be proud of,” said Chancellor Peacock. —Olivia Simone

Carmina Burana

Appalachian's Symphony Orchestra, University Singers, Treble Choir and Men's Glee Club harmonized together to perform Carmina Burana—which is Latin for “Songs of Buren.”

“It was very gratifying—and unifying. It’s the power of doing something collaborative,” said Dr. Priscilla Porterfield, Director of Appalachian’s Treble Choir.

Not synthesized into a play, Carmina Burana was instead a series of Goliard poems set to music. Dating back to the 12th century, Goliards were traveling minstrels of England, France and Germany. Their secular songs and poems satirized the church and portrayed their frustrations in life. It wasn’t until the Benedictine monastery in Buren in the 1800s that Germany was secularized and a hidden collection of these songs and poems was uncovered. In 1934, composer Carl Orff arranged the music for 24 of the Goliard poems. He never imposed directions for staging, costuming or scenery and there were no continuous characters or storyline. Because of this, different interpretations of Carmina Burana have been performed over the years.

Musical talents at Appalachian performed Carmina Burana once at Farthing Auditorium and three times at Blumenthal Performing Arts Center in Charlotte. The performances in Charlotte had the added feature of ballet dancers from the North Carolina Dance Theater.

“It made you feel like a performer. It was very special because of the dancers,” said Porterfield.

In Charlotte, the orchestra played in the pit and the choirs sang in the box seats while the dancers took the stage. Soloists included two of Appalachian’s professors—Dr. Julia Pedigo and Dr. Joseph Amaya. The combined choirs and orchestra accounted for 250 performers from the University.

“It was overwhelming and exciting to be where all the broadways are,” Rachel Williams, a member of the Treble Choir, said.

All the elements that meshed together for Carmina Burana—instruments, singers and dancers—was one of the Music Department’s most memorable performances.

“I felt that we all did a good job and I was glad that the singers got the experience of singing this wonderful work. I was also proud of my students and of the music school,” said Dr. Roosevelt Escalante, director of the Men’s Glee Club. •Olivia Simone

Creative writing

Ten years after Southern writer Truman Capote established a prestigious scholarship for creative writing majors, our university received an extra $25,000. The university first invested the extra money, and then the creative writing program received the accumulated interest.

Every spring semester, rising juniors and seniors under the creative writing program could submit works of poetry or prose to compete for the Truman Capote Literary Trust Scholarship. With the additional $25,000, the scholarship gained value.

"It makes our program distinctive and helped bring attention," Dr. Susan Weinberg said.

Peter Blair, author of "The Divine Salt," was chosen to judge this year's competition. Last year's winner, Tim Pratt, graduated and had one of his short stories published in "The Best Stories of 2005," by Houghton Mifflin. He also wrote a novel called "The Strange Adventures of Rangergirl," published by Bantam Spectra.

Yosef

Name: Dan'l Boone Yoseff (or Yosef for short)

Age: 63

Campus involvement: ASU's Mascot; pumped fans up at sporting events and promoted school spirit and good times at Appalachian.

Why did Yosef choose ASU? Originally filled a blank page in the 1942 yearbook, Dan'l Boone Yoseff had evolved to the "Yosef" we all knew and loved in the 2005-2006 academic year.

Yosef's most memorable moment at App: When the football team won the first national title for any sport in ASU's history.

Where does Yosef see himself in the future? Defending a national title, hopefully a few updates to his appearance (including the boots and mask) and continuing to promote the Mountaineer spirit at Appalachian State University.

Most college students found themselves on the beaches partying during spring break; however, the Lutheran Students of Appalachian touched lives and warmed hearts in the poverty stricken country of Nicaragua.

Fifteen highly motivated college students were given the opportunity to develop leadership and put their faith into action by assisting with the construction of a library at New Generation School in Masatepe, Nicaragua.

The Lutheran Students of Appalachian, or LSA, did all the planning and fund-raising on their own. In addition to building a library, students led the school children in reading activities, as well as led a workshop for teachers at the school and in the community on character development.

A little help went a long way, as proven by LSA, with some faith and service. It only took 15 compassionate students to bring literacy and hope to 300 young students in Masatepe, serve 17 teachers and a librarian, and bring character education workshops to as many as 100 teachers throughout the community.

LSA reached their goal of positively affecting the future of those young children who lived in a region where the unemployment rate was 60 percent. These children were blessed with the possibility of a brighter future. •Meg Letts

BGLADD presents... "What a Drag"

What a drag...pun intended!" On the night of Oct. 22, students and members of the Boone community were once again dazed, amazed and more than a little surprised during the BGLADD drag show held at Legends.

The drag show was a 27-year-old event that took place bi-annually at Appalachian. The show was open to anyone and was usually a big event with a large community turnout. Students and members of the community were encouraged to attend and even participate.

The event was divided into two parts, a drag show in the first half and dance party in the second. During the show, each queen came out individually and performed a song of his choice. The drags walked out into the crowd and sang and danced for the audience while the queens performed. Spectators often reached out and touched them or stuck dollar bills in their clothing.

"This was my first time attending a drag show. I really enjoyed the show and I think it was great to see all of these guys act out and be creative...you could tell they put in a lot of time making themselves over and they kept the audience entertained," said freshman Alisha Park.

Aaron Sperling, a member of the community and a long time drag show coordinator, was pleased with this fall's show. "This year, aside from the queens from Asheville, we had one ASU student, one alumnus and one faculty member perform. Sperling went on to say that the show had "one of the best attendances ever."

Though there were few decorations, the varied costumes of those performing more than made up for the lack of adornment. Sophomore Jeff Cain, who participated as a queen, commented on one of his favorite outfits. "There was a drag from Asheville called Celeste Star. He was wearing this huge wig and a black bra with nails sticking out of it. When he was walking around and performing, people would stick dollar bills on the nails."

When asked what he thought of the show, Cain said, "It was great and a lot of fun. This was my first show, but I would definitely do it again." •Ashley Daniels

As part of Appalachian's relief effort, the Appalachian Wesley Foundation, along with a college group from Boone United Methodist Church, took 37 students and a few community members to Mississippi. Here, they aided flood relief work for Hurricane Katrina victims.

The group left Boone on the Friday before fall break, and worked all day Saturday, Sunday and Monday in conjunction with the Salvation Army. Biloxi, Miss. lay under 30 feet of water.

"The coverage that we'd previously seen on television paled in comparison to the actual devastation," Appalachian student Gina Wooten said. "There was a lot of work to be done."

Students worked on filing boxes of donated canned goods, others cleaned out warehouse rooms and some went on canteens to serve hot meals to residents who didn't have the means to provide for themselves.

"We quickly realized that if we didn't pass out food, if we didn't pack up boxes or if we didn't clean out rooms, these people would not be able to function," Wooten said.

The Wesley Foundation observed the beginning stages of an eye-opening rebuilding process, leaving with a rewarding, yet humbling experience and the desire to help out more with the Hurricane Katrina relief efforts. •Meg Letts

Student Ambassadors' GiveSTRONG

Appropriately named GiveSTRONG, the Student Ambassadors lent a helping hand to the Watauga Hunger Coalition by collecting cans for the homeless and less fortunate in the community.

"It helps our community, and being that our organization is service-oriented, it was a natural thing to help out our local community," ambassador Mike Trivette said.

In order to collect as many cans as possible, there was a little twist to spice up the fundraiser. For every five cans a student donated, their names were put into a drawing that could give them the chance to switch roles with Chancellor Kenneth E. Peacock. As Chancellor-for-a-day, the student's agenda would consist of attending his meetings, answering his calls, eating meals with the Vice Chancellors, and seeing how the university was managed on a daily basis. Meanwhile, Chancellor Peacock would attend all the student's classes for that day.

The Ambassadors also set up collection sites at off-campus apartments and grocery stores. Still giving and still going strong, the Ambassadors showed their compassion and dedication to the community.

"It helps our neighbors in the high country and shows that the spirit of Appalachian is alive and well, and it's nice to be able to showcase our Ambassador organization and what we do," Trivette said. •Olivia Simone

On Nov. 5, the Exercise Science program of Appalachian hosted its 1st Annual Run for Relief 5K Run/Walk. Proceeds from the event were donated to the American Red Cross for Hurricane Katrina efforts. The event was very successful with over 100 individuals participating and raising a total of $2,539. Many participants were members of the cross country team with Paul Stalzhus winning the Male Division with a time of 18:06 and Meg Letts winning the Female Division with a time of 23:02. "It was an excellent turnout and we were happy for the participants. This money will go a long way to helping those affected by Katrina." •Ashley Daniels

The Hispanic Student Association put on a celebration to celebrate the Hispanic community of Appalachian State University on Wednesday, Oct. 5 from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in the Blue Ridge Ballroom of Plemmons Student Union.

From the Blue Ridge Ballroom came an array of Hispanic music, full of life and color. A line wrapped around the room as students waited for their turn to fill up on a variety of traditional Spanish cuisine such as tacos, Spanish rice, and dishes full of various spices and sauces.

Students were introduced to salsa dancing which began at 8 p.m. The Hispanic Student Association was known for their sponsoring of salsa and Latin style dance techniques.

"I liked the fact that they had food, crafts, and even dancing," said Ginny Price, a psychology major at Appalachian. "It was a whole window into their culture that I have never experienced before."

The HSA mission was to bring together the Hispanic community and increase university awareness of the Hispanic presence on campus. ●Meg Letts

As of spring 2005 there was a new club introduced to the campus known as the ASU Trail Crew. The group, a service club dedicated to "building and maintaining regional trails" existed long before it was made official by the Center for Student Involvement and Leadership.

"Some other students and myself were already doing some volunteer trail maintenance and wanted university recognition so we could accomplish more and also involve more people," said Chris Peckham, the Trail Crew's president. "We believe that having an active trail maintenance crew provides an outlet for further student development, reflection and community service."

The crew received official club status in the month of February and had been hard at work every since with planning, outdoor service projects, fundraisers and maintaining the clubs web site, www.trailcrew.appstate.edu.

"We are a service club dedicated to building and maintaining regional trails...so far we have given over 500 hours of student labor to projects such as Appalachian Trail, Mountains to Sea Trail and trails at Buffalo Mountain," said Peckham.

The club, though fairly new, already made their mark on the environmental service community by working closely with groups like the Tennessee Eastman Hiking Club, (a non-profit organization with members ranging from ages 64-94). •Ashley Daniels

The National Student Speech Language Hearing Association (NSSLHA) participated in the ASHA Convention on November 18 in San Diego, California.

The NSSLHA was founded in 1972 for students, managed by students. It was a pre-professional membership association for students interested in careers dealing with communication sciences and disorders. The NSSLHA had 11,000 members in 301 colleges and universities, Appalachian being one of them.

The annual convention was a great opportunity for students to meet for discussions, workshops, presentations, and informal talk on communication disorders. Students spent the day participating in NSSLHA-sponsored activities developed by student members of the executive board. Activities were based on applying communication science skills.

The convention also connected students in the area of communication science disorders. It brought together students pursuing alike studies in the fields of speech and audiology. Together, students formed a bond and network that would last throughout their careers. •Meg Nighttime, darkness, Halloween....a perfect time to go to a haunted trail. The Teaching Fellows created a cinema of terror complete with frightening costumes, makeup, props, and scenery. The trail was embedded in the dark woods on Horn in the West Drive.

Before entering the trail, a video was shown inside a dark cabin. It was a tale of a murderer named Gutter who had haunted the trail for many years. A news team who went to investigate suddenly vanished—and the night celebrated the 20th anniversary of their disappearance. Thus, the story ended and the trail began. Sent through a twisted hallway, lights flashed sporadically and a victim in an electric chair screamed for mercy. Characters with spooky white faces and black costumes jumped out of the dark, startling the visitors. Outside, the trail was covered in leaves and bordered by tall trees, which made the night seem darker. Walking along the trail, more characters followed closely, some running with chainsaws.

At the end of the trail, two people convincingly said they got separated from their group and didn't know where to go. Suddenly, they were attacked and fell to the ground. Once off the trail, it was hard to tell where to go from there, creating a little more fear. The Teaching Fellows gave their best, most horrifying performances. The Haunted Trail made the patrons forget they were in a trail and believe they were part of a real-life scary movie. ●Olivia Simone

One of the most "green" organizations on campus, ASUSES, or Appalachian State University Sustainable Energy Society finished out its tenth year with a bang...or at least a twinkle.

One of the biggest and most anticipated events of the year was the Christmas tree lighting held on Dec. 2. The festivities started with a "pre-lighting" party at Our Daily Bread restaurant on King Street. Party-goers came together for food, fellowship and music from the band Wehuttu Mudpuppies. Around 7:30 p.m. the party moved over to the Jones House across the street where guest speaker Ned Ryan Doyle spoke to a crowd of about 150 onlookers. The topic of the speech was energy and environmental issues. When Mr. Doyle finished, the mayor took his place to address the group before flipping the switch to light the Christmas tree powered by energy from the sun and a battery bank. Afterwards, the group moved back to Our Daily Bread and carried out the annual raffle.

Aside from the Christmas tree lighting, the club, which was presided over by senior Joe Hallock, was active in planning Solar House Tours, free weekly renewable energy workshops and presentations for local public schools.

Dr. Dennis Scanlin, who advised the club, spoke very highly of the students involved. "The club provides valuable services to their campus, community and the greater North Carolina region. I think it's safe to say they are the most active group on campus. They go above and beyond the call of duty on campus and it's been a real pleasure to be associated with them. "

Running alone with no one to talk to except for strangers, who politely say hello, could be a little tedious. Some found it satisfying, but others found it unmotivating. Several students who did not enjoy running solo participated in the Running Club. The club had about 15 people, meaning 15 people to socialize with while running. Every week they did two morning runs at 7:30 a.m. and two night runs at 9:00 p.m. A few of the members even competed in cross country races held at State Farm. They were not required to do every run and participated at their own will.

"I like having people to run with without the pressure," Kristen Felts said.

The Running Club was for those who enjoyed running with people while staying physically active. •Olivia Simone

The New Play Festival illuminated the theatrical talents on campus. Students directed, acted and produced each play. Every spring, students, staff and faculty submitted scripts to be showcased the following fall. Only a few were chosen by a specially formed committee within the Playcrafters.

"The New Play Festival is meant to spread theater to the campus, encourage new and creative works from our students and give an increased awareness to ASU's theater department," said Nikki Caruso.

The Festival presented three plays. "A Gravedigger's Eulogy," written by Luke Aeschleman, told a story of two gravediggers who were burying a young girl. As they did their tasks, they were forced to recall their own failed attempts at being fathers. John Crutchfield's play, "Bob Agonistes," was about an unlucky man who suddenly got whatever he desired. He lavished in riches, women and power—and in the end it turned out that no conflict in life was the greatest conflict of all. In the absurdist comedy spelled "Profets," written by Ira Sargent, a prophet named Clarence had a vision of the end of the world and tried to spread his message, but countless people, including a newlywed couple, a janitor and some fellow prophets, doubted him.

The New Play Festival was the primary fundraiser for Playcrafters and earned them about $500 this year. Not only that, but students had the opportunity to exhibit every aspect of creativity from playwriting and acting, to directing and producing. •Olivia Simone

The American Correctional Association sponsored "Convict Criminology—Tales from Inside of Prison," which gave the viewers a look behind bars. Students listened to Andrew Ferguson, a professor of convict criminology, tell his story of imprisonment.

After high school, Professor Ferguson enlisted in the Air Force and was one of the first soldiers to fight in Desert Storm. He then became a police officer in the area of narcotics. His partner was a convicted felon under investigation. Under federal indictment, he pleaded guilty for his partner who was selling illegal machine guns. Ironically, the day after he graduated from Gardner-Webb University, he was sentenced to a 46-month term of imprisonment.

The harassment of being a cop in prison usually resulted in solitary confinement. Ferguson however, was a yard boss. His eyes did not see the stereotypes of the prisons displayed on television and in movies. He said 80 percent of prisoners are nonviolent. Prison rape was usually consensual and not as common as people imagined. Drug smuggling was nearly impossible and it was mostly the prison guards who did it to make money. He also said that two-thirds of convicts fell back into prison because they could not find jobs. Ferguson had a difficult time becoming a professor after he earned doctorates in criminal justice and history at Appalachian. The university held numerous meetings to allow him to teach.

He uncovered the misconceptions people have of prisoners and showed that if given a chance, these people can become important in society. •Olivia Simone

"What you don't know can kill you..." This was one of the main points stressed at the annual AIDS Awareness Week hosted by the Black Student Association. The general public was encouraged to attend this weeklong event that included a video and discussion meeting, guest speaker, and information fair.

A video showing of statistical information and images of AIDS victims took the place of the Black Student Association's usual Monday afternoon meetings. Following the film, officials in the club provided listeners with statistical information and made it a point to stress that AIDS doesn't have a "look" but instead affects a wide range of people. Victims of AIDS weren't always tattooed, pierced, or sexually promiscuous. Charmeen Mack, a member of the BSA advisory board, expressed that organizations need to bring the AIDS crisis to the attention of the greater Boone community.

"We felt the need to make the campus more aware of what's going on in the world by giving information and statistics. AIDS is a rapidly spreading epidemic among our age group so it's important for us to become aware of it," Mack said. •Ashley Daniels

Summer training for cross country involved a number of elements that tested athletes, forcing them to become better runners. This was the story of a few dedicated individuals. Junior Mark Maddox, along with some other athletes, traveled to Colorado University at Boulder to train at altitude. Boulder was arguably the best training site in America for cross country. Its abundant trails offered runners a variety of training courses. "Training in Colorado this summer was amazing. We arrived in Boulder on May 14 and stayed until August 1, so we had a good 11 weeks of training out there," Maddox said.

Runners returned to the program in the fall with a prominent host of talent. Seniors Adam Van Nortwick and Matt Hudson were already considered top runners. Van Nortwick, a St. Lawrence University transfer in his second season with Appalachian, was a Division III national runner-up in cross country, as well as All-Southern Conference in track. Hudson, who competed in a tough Western Athletic Conference at Wyoming, wanted to run for ASU as a graduate student in his fourth year of eligibility. Maddox joined the field of competitors as an All-SoCon athlete.

At more than 5,000 feet in elevation, Boulder had a decreased level of oxygen. It took runners a short while to adjust to this; when they did, training involved logging between 70 and 105 miles per week with one tempo run. Mountaineer runners trained with the national-champion Buffalo runners, who knew something about summer training.

Colorado terrain also helped ASU athletes improve. The mix of dirt, rocky areas and hills prepared them for most courses in North Carolina and other running sites on the schedule. Boone offered a good training environment in itself, and Boulder only enhanced some of the runners' ability to adjust to different competitive courses. "We practice on hills and dirt, we race on the flat at State Farm Field and train on grass some, we've just been blessed with some great places to train," coach Michael Curcio said.

Paul Stoltzfus, Noah Niwinski and Russel Warriner joined Maddox in Boulder, along with three female runners from Davidson. Maddox and company kept in touch with Curcio, e-mailing their progress and overall status each week. The athletes took care to bring their summer changes into the fall. "The success to any program is commitment and discipline. This group of men and women really had that commitment to go out to Colorado and train," Curcio said. "Sometimes you mix that in with a little luck and chemistry and you come up with a good team."

Improvements and training were visible during fall meets. Second overall behind Florida State University, the ASU men showed impressive stamina at the Covered Bridge Open Sept. 2 and placed 10 runners in the top 25, with Van Nortwick third at 25:53.83 and Maddox in sixth at 26:01.02. The men edged out North Carolina for second overall again at the Blue Ridge Open Oct. 15 with three runners in the top 25. ASU was only behind Texas. Team members built themselves on practice with some of that starting out on the trails of Colorado in the Rocky Mountains. Putting on a focused mind-set, the runners trained daily, sometimes twice, in rain or shine. "Colorado helped us improve simply because it gave us an opportunity to get in shape," Maddox said. "The trails were incredible, and the atmosphere of the whole area was great." —Adam King

What happens in an athlete's typical day? You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q: What time do you wake up?

A: Before 7 a.m., we have to run then.

Q: What activities are usually on your schedule?

A: We run on Tuesdays and Thursdays; other days we workout or swim. We do long runs at State Farm or Bass Lake. It changes as the season goes on. It lasts about an hour or an hour and a half.

Q: What foods do you eat to help you run?

A: I eat a lot of pasta near race time. After a workout, I eat a steak to put the protein back in my body.

Q: What are some of your pre-race rituals?

A: I get a lot of sleep the night before, and on the day of the race I sit around not talking to people. I get focused on what I have to do.

Unity Through prayer

Anticipation at the start of a race can be nerve racking. Your heart is beating out of your chest. Your nerves set in, did you stretch enough? Physically you have been trained to do what you need to do, but are you mentally up for the challenge? Many people do not realize that Cross Country was, in many ways, is more a mental sport than a physical one. In order to mentally be prepared for a race, second semester freshman, Kala Robertson, knew how to get her team ready for a victory. With a few words of prayer at the starting line before meets, Robertson helped give her team the strength they needed for a win.

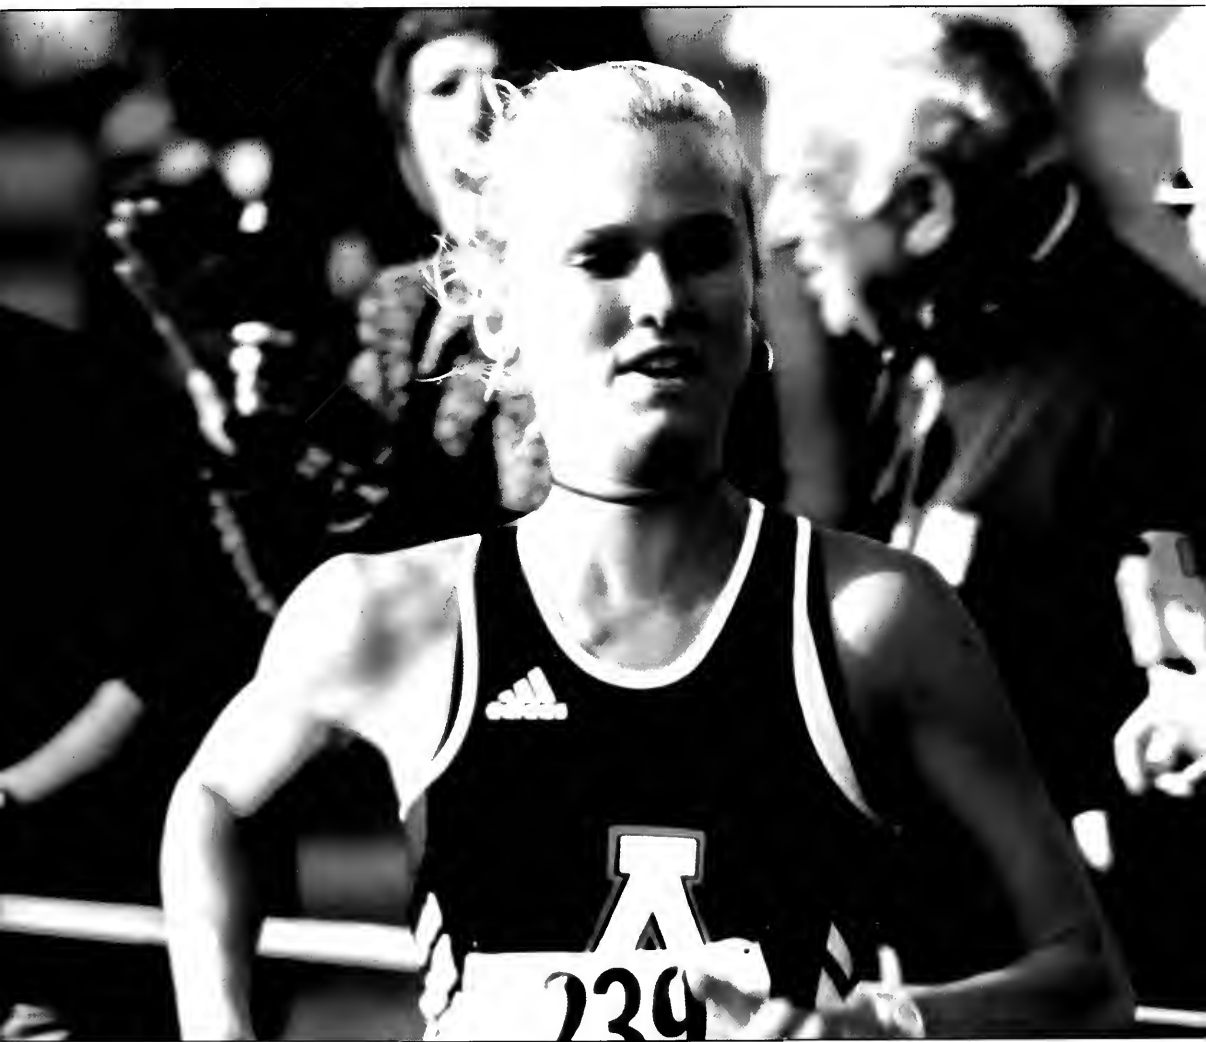

Prayer, no matter what religion you were, had a way of relieving tension, reducing stress and relaxing the body. Robertson had always prayed before her races. As a transfer student from Dobson, North Carolina, Robertson brought with her a new tradition. "At our first race I mentioned prayer as a team, and told the team whoever wanted could come do it with me. The whole team got together. I have never really had a full girl team pray with me, and to have them stand with me and pray means a lot. It shows that my teammates support me."

With a tough loss of top upperclassmen runners, the ladies grabbed eight of the top ten spots in the Appalachian Cross Country Open and a 4th place finish in the Covered Bridge Open. Robertson believed prayer affected the team in a different way. "We all realize that we wouldn't even have the chance to be here if it wasn't for God. I think we all believe that when God gives you a gift he expects you to use it. Every time we go out and hammer a workout, run smart on recovery days, run over the summer when no one is watching or push harder to catch one more person when we could settle, that is when we do our part. God gives us the health, strength and determination to get us through our part. Our prayer before the race helps us not to forget who gave us our gift." •Megan Watson

What happens in an athlete's typical day? You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q: On race day, what time do you wake up?

A: I normally get up around 8:00 a.m.. If my race is in the morning I get up 3 hours prior to the race in order to eat breakfast.

Q: What do you eat for breakfast or lunch?

A: At breakfast I will eat oatmeal or an energy bar and some fruit. At lunch I just stick with a banana, peanut butter and honey sandwich.

Q: Do you shower the night before, or the morning of a race?

A: I shower the morning of my race because it definitely wakes me up!

Q: What drills do you do while warming up?

A: We do an assortment of drills such as butt kicks, different arm drills, karaoke, and high knees. Our team jogs a 15 minute warm-up an hour before the race, and then our stretching and warm up drills follow.

Whether you said kaduregel, football, piłka nożna, fodbold, or just plain soccer, you were speaking of one of the most popular sports played around the world. This fast-paced game requiring skill, endurance and a quick mind, was admired by many spectators and played around the globe. This season, Appalachian State University had the privilege of learning from four international players on the team. Although soccer was not the national sport in New Zealand, it was picked up and mastered by freshman Cameron McCarthy. Growing up in North Shore City, McCarthy started playing soccer at the age of five. Practicing and rigorously training, McCarthy was able to play for a club in North Shore Utd., and at his High School, Westlake Boys. Both teams were regarded as the two most prestigious in their respective leagues in New Zealand. It was not until playing in the Dallas Cup in 2004 that McCarthy was scouted by assistant coach Liam Farrell to come play at Appalachian. "I already knew I wanted to come to college in the US. I just didn't know how to go about it and where I should go to look. However, things with Appalachian progressed and I got recruited here."

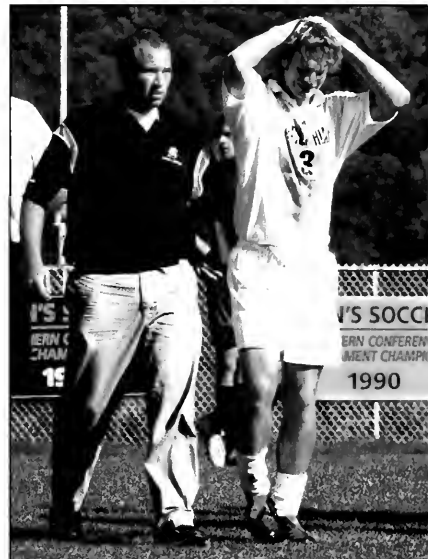

"I remember watching Cameron's team play a very good team out of Oklahoma. They were pretty out matched and quickly went down by a few goals. I then watched Cameron bring his team back almost single-handedly combining excellent skills and fierce competitiveness. Cameron has a great personality that combined with his kiwi accent makes him a team favorite," Farrell said.

McCarthy had played soccer for 14 years before coming to play in the States, but he found it a bit challenging "The main difference I found was getting used to the pace of the game. In the first game I played here I was hankered after 30 minutes, even though I received the highest score on our pre-season fitness test. The pace was intense." He also found a challenge in adjusting to living in a new country, all while keeping a busy typical college schedule. "The hardest thing has been trying to be disciplined while away from my family for the first time. Adjusting to the expectations of my new coaches and teammates wasn't hard, but still different than what I was used to."

With the obvious determination and level of skill demonstrated by McCarthy as a freshman, Appalachian's soccer program had a lot to look forward to over the next few years. This player only promised to get better with every kick. •Megan Watson

What happens in an athletes typical day?
You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q: On a game day, what do you eat for breakfast or lunch?

A: I don't really have a particular type of diet I follow on game day. I just have two rules. No soda, and if the game is early I'll eat a bigger breakfast than lunch. If the game is late, I'll eat a small breakfast and bigger lunch.

Q: What time do you wake up on game day?

A: I wake up on game day for whatever time I have classes (during the week). If the game is on the weekend, I'm generally still up by about 9 a.m.

Q: What is the last thing you do right before the game starts?

A: The last things I do generally right before a game are change from a warm up top to the game jersey, grab a quick cup of water and then put my shin guards on.

A new playing facility at State Farm Fields was a change that members of the women's squad garnered mixed feelings for when they started using Appalachian State University Soccer Stadium in August.

With the shift from Field Turf to grass, the playing surface became flatter, therefore having more ground to cover. This aspect challenged players' stamina. Soccer programs at ASU had played on turf since 1970. It took some time for players to adjust to the new surroundings. Games at Kidd Brewer Stadium featured a distinguished up-tempo style of play on the Field Turf. Adjusting to a more traditional style of play on natural grass was less than satisfying to some. "I don't like it because I'm used to turf. The game is quicker on turf also," senior Hallie Briggs said.

Several returning players joined Briggs' opinion, not only for the surface, but for the location factor as well. While Kidd Brewer Stadium seated fans in the thousands at times, seating at ASU Soccer Stadium allowed for a capacity of 360. Fortunately, this did not stop the team from posting 10-plus wins to match wins of the top three women's programs in ASU history. Some players did not see attendance as an issue. "It doesn't seem to be a problem, it has enough seats so far," senior Katie Blaylock said.

Perks of the situation were not overlooked. An irrigation and drainage system was installed to keep the field, which was bluegrass sod, in excellent condition for future seasons. Plans for a permanent concession area and locker room facility were also on the table. The grass setting helped players adjust to key road games on grass as well. Grass games brought a different approach to building teams and focusing competition. "The new facility will help us in our recruiting process and also to be able to schedule better teams that like to play on grass," coach Ben Popoola said.

Players had positive hopes for their new home. "A new field should bring new things on the field, it has great potential for a lot of games to be won," Blaylock said.

Having an exclusive place to play, both soccer programs had less trouble scheduling games and practices as well. •Adam King

Appalachian State's soccer programs were provided with their own field for the 2005 season. Previously, the Mountaineers shared Kidd Brewer Stadium with the field hockey and football teams. The new stadium is part of Appalachian State's athletic enhancement program. The field has seats for 360 fans. There are also plans for locker rooms and additional athletic facilities at the field in the future. •David Mulvaney

What happens in an athletes typical day? You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q: What time do you wake up?

A: Around 8 a.m.

Q: What are some of your practice rituals.

A: We always use stretching as our time to catch up with each other on our days.

Q: What are some of your pregame rituals?

A: I like to listen to music and try to relax.

Q: What else should people know about your typical day?

A: Soccer is pretty time consuming. Especially in the afternoon. It's only two hours but you have to be there 30 minutes before to get in to training gear. Game days are a little hectic too.

In the 2002 volleyball season, the rules were changed at the college level. The new position of the “libero” was implemented into the rule books. Already a position used by many club teams and professionals, the libero gave each team the option of registering an optional, specialized back row defensive player. Many people were unfamiliar with this somewhat new position. How could you tell if the player was the libero? To distinguish them from their other teammates, they wore a different colored jersey. “I don’t really feel different wearing a different colored jersey,” remarks Kali Rumberger one of ASU’s senior libero players. “There are three girls on the team who have played libero in games this year, but there is only one person who plays it in a game.”

The libero was allowed to replace any player in the back row without counting as a substitution and there was no limit to the number of libero replacements a team was allowed. Despite these advantages, there were also things the libero could not do. The libero could not serve, block, attempt to block or complete an attack hit from anywhere on or off the court if, at the moment of contact, the ball is entirely above the top of the net. “What I like about playing libero is I’m a short girl and big girls always think that they are good. I love being able to stop their balls, proving to them that I can do it. I also really enjoy the physical part of it. I love diving to the ground for balls,” Rumberger said. “I don’t like not being able to hit. I want to be able to put some heat behind the ball.”

Libero was changing the game of volleyball, and taking it to another level. Adding the position to high school and even junior high level teams this year, libero was slowly but surely being seen and understood. —Megan Watson

Every Game is on the road

Southern Conference athletics did not include field hockey in its line up of varsity sports, therefore Appalachian State University players spent a large chunk of the season traveling to play teams in the Northern Pacific Conference. These teams featured Berkeley, St. Louis and others. Radford University, located in Radford, Virginia, was the closest venue.

Field hockey was not the most popular sport in the Southeast, but the team made it their own spectacle in an environment less supportive than other regions of the United States. Although the Atlantic Coast Conference had some of the best college programs in the nation, high school programs were not popular in North Carolina. The Mountaineer roster was composed mostly of out-of-state athletes.

"It brings a unique challenge to us as far as recruiting," head coach Mandy Latz said. As the sport owned a more dominant culture in the Northeast, a third of the team hailed from New Jersey or Pennsylvania. A unique bond formed within the team that paralleled how the NorPac was unique to ASU sports—one of a kind. Everybody on the team fought homesickness at some point. "It creates a neat environment," Latz said. "We have representation from east to west."

Home attendance suffered as games routinely drew less than 1,000 fans. Players failed to produce a significant winning streak as they sat at 2-10 three quarters into the season. Most of ASU's family fans appeared at away games. "It's a challenge to shine as a team in a place where not many people have even heard about it, let alone are interested in learning about it," junior Andrea Lee said.

Tragically, the community learned a little more about a field hockey athlete midway through the season as a result of an accident. Sophomore Julie Nagel died from a car accident Oct. 8, 2005 when traveling to her home in Gaithersburg, Maryland for fall break. The painful event brought the team and coaching staff even closer to one another. Nagel's death triggered emotional support from several sports programs at ASU, with memorials and a moment of silence at the Oct. 15 home football game vs. Georgia Southern. Players remember Nagel's positive spirit and great sense of humor.

"She had the ability to greatly impact everyone she met. When she stepped on the field the whole team was lifted to a new level," Lee said.

Player commitments to the game were unquestionable throughout the season despite a sub-par record. Senior Kate Ryno continued her star-studded career at goalkeeper earning another NorPac Defensive Player of the Week and recording more than 100 saves over the season. Ryno was selected for the national North/South All-Star Game. Other girls stepped up, like Carrie Johnson, who Latz called the "voice of our backfield." "Players proved in their wins and closer games they had potential and the ability to play well at the highest level of competition," Latz said. •Adam King

[Below] Alison Gradischer battles with Catawba's Jill Archambault. Like most of the other members of the team, Gradischer was from New England. Gradischer had one goal on the year in 10 shots, and started all 17 games for the Mountaineers. •Dan Hood

Black Saturday rolled around once every football season, just as the Georgia Southern University game did. By the grace of the gridiron gods, those events were scheduled for the same day. On a sunny fall day in mid-October, 16th ranked GSU came to town to face the 19th ranked Mountaineers. Devoted fans expected nothing less than a heavily pressed, spectacle-worthy game.

"It's always been a big rivalry with us and Georgia Southern, two powerhouses in the conference. I think any game with them is always going to be huge," ASU alumnus Clint Hughes said.

Acclaimed as top-notch in the Southern Conference, the Eagles' running game was expected to march on the Mountaineers' 4-3 defense. It was a match-up worth showing up for. "Every two years we look forward to coming up here; we feel like we have something to prove. I expect my Eagles to be at their best today," GSU alumna Kelly Callaway said. As a SoCon ring match, the game was equally important for both teams because a victory would keep them in a 1st place tie in the conference. "This is a big week to start three big weeks. We know we have to be ready for them and cut down on mistakes," tight end Daniel Bettis said.

Offensively, ASU showed poise. Tailback Kevin Richardson totaled more than 200 yards on the ground, while quarterback Richie Williams compiled 243 all-purpose yards on the day. Equally important was the defensive game, which performed as a well-oiled machine. The Mountaineer defense held a high scoring GSU offense to their lowest yardage output of the season which helped hold the Eagles to seven points in the ASU victory. "This game meant a whole lot," cornerback Jerome Touchstone said. "It's always like a rivalry game, but we go out everyday with some excitement and intensity. We swarm to the football."

At the beginning of the season the team agreed to compete not only for a SoCon title, but an NCAA title as well. "Everybody's shooting for a ring," defensive end Marques Murrell said. Later in the season, Murrell and his comrades would fit for two types of rings. •Adam King

A: I wake up every day at 7:30 for lifting and class.

Q: What activities are on your typical schedule?

A: Mondays you wake up and feel like crap because you played a game Saturday. We do weights and lift as much as possible to take the soreness away. I eat, go to class, eat again, we have 2:30 meetings and 4-7 practice. At 7:30 p.m I go to the training table.

Q: What are some of your favorite foods?

A: Chick-Fil-A and the sub shop are good.

Q: What else should people know about you?

A: I lead bible studies on Wednesday and talk some about how football relates to life and how we are blessed with certain talents.

FIRST ROUND APPALACHIAN STATE 34 LAFAYETTE 23

Game Notes:

- Quarterback Richie Williams became the all-time SoCon leader in total offensive yards. In the second half, Williams threw three touchdown passes, two of which were to tight end Daniel Bettis during the fourth quarter.
- Lafayette effectively owned the clock during the first half, controlling the ball for 22:35.
- Sophomore Kevin Richardson rushed for 171 yards and a touchdown.
- Appalachian State's defense stood strong during the second half giving up just six points on two field goals.

Play of the Game: Running back Kevin Richardson busted out a 38 yard touchdown run midway through the second half. Richardson outran several Lafayette players and dove into the endzone for the Mountaineers' first touchdown of the game.

Fumbling became the name of the game when Appalachian State took on Lafayette College on Nov. 26. Lafayette lost two of three fumbles, while the Mountaineers kept Lafayette in the game with two turnovers on six fumbles. Senior linebacker Brad West forced a fumble on Lafayette's Leonard Johnathan Hurt early in the game. •Johnathan Williams

QUARTERFINAL ROUND APPALACHIAN STATE 38 SOUTHERN ILLINOIS 24

Game Notes:

- Quarterback Richie Williams passed for 3 touchdowns and rushed for another. All three touchdown passes were for 40 yards or more. Williams passed for a season high 367 yards.
- Sophomore running back Kevin Richardson led the ground attack with 99 yards. Richardson also contributed 61 yards of receiving to an offense that had 500 total yards.
- Southern Illinois' first score came when Craig Turner returned the opening kickoff of the second half 93 yards, for a touchdown.
- Senior wide receiver Brandon Turner had a career performance leading the Mountaineers with 104 receiving yards on 4 catches.

Play of the Game: With less than three minutes to go in the game, Appalachian State was protecting a 14 point lead over Southern Illinois. With everybody in the stadium expecting the Mountaineers to run out the clock, coaches made a daring call. Richie Williams dropped back and connected with Dexter Jackson for a 40 yard touchdown pass that secured the game.

Safety Jeremy Wiggins returns an interception against Southern Illinois. The Mountaineers picked off quarterback Joel Sambursky two times during the game. Appalachian State's pass defense was strong throughout the play offs preventing big plays and creating 5 interceptions. •Johnathan Williams

SEMIFINAL ROUND APPALACHIAN STATE 29 FURMAN 23

Game Notes:

- Quarterback Richie Williams led a Mountaineer touchdown drive on the opening possession of the game. Williams suffered a strained achilles tendon on a run during the second possession.
- Backup quarterback Trey Elder proved himself in the victory. Elder passed for 165 yards and added 69 yards on the ground.
- Senior defensive end Jason Hunter caused a fumble by Furman quarterback Ingle Martin with less than a minute to go. The fumble was picked up by lineman Omar Byrom and returned to the Mountaineers' 1 yard line.
- Black and Gold faithful filled the stadium as an Appalachian State playoff record of 15,307 fans were in attendance.

Play of the Game: After quarterback Richie Williams was taken out of the game with a strained achilles tendon, sophomore backup Trey Elder stepped in and threw a 45 yard touchdown pass to Dexter Jackson on his first toss of the game.

Senior Brandon Turner hauls in a long pass from quarterback Richie Williams during the Mountaineers' opening possession of the national semi-final against Furman University. Turner was a "go to" man during the playoffs averaging 70 receiving yards per game including a career high 104 yards against Southern Illinois. Jonathan Williams

NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP APPALACHIAN STATE 21 NORTHERN IOWA 16

Game Notes:

- Sophomore quarterback Trey Elder made only the second start of his career. Elder had 123 yards of passing on 9 of 16 completions. He also tossed one interception before being replaced late in the second half.
- Defensive ends Marques Murrell and Jason Hunter had 2 sacks a piece and forced Northern Iowa's quarterback Eric Sanders out of the pocket several times.
- The Mountaineer defense stood strong during the second half keeping Northern Iowa scoreless for the last 30 minutes of the game.
- Northern Iowa scored 13 points off of turnovers during the first half. Two fumbles and an interception gave the Panthers a 16-7 lead at halftime.
- Quarterback Richie Williams, nursing an injury, came into the game for the last play of the second half heaving up a hail mary that was broken up near the goal line. During the second half, Williams threw for 129 yards and even scrambled on one play for a 3 yard gain. Williams provided a huge emotional boost for the team and the 12,000 plus Mountaineer fans that made the trip to Chattanooga.

Play of the Game: Defensive end Marques Murrell caused a fumble on Northern Iowa quarterback Eric Sanders midway through the fourth quarter. Senior defensive end Jason Hunter picked up the fumble, shed a few tackles and ran 15 yards into the endzone to give the Mountaineers a 21-16 lead they would not relinquish.

NATIONAL

No team-sport program at Appalachian State University had ever brought home an NCAA national title until December 16, 2005, when the football team took the school into a new era. This was the same team that went win less on the road the previous season—the same team that became nationally know because it was the butt of an example of a “tune-up game” in the Adam Sandler movie “The Longest Yard.” Ironically, this team disproved skeptics around the nation. That irony was not just in the dramatic instance. It was created by a team that focused long enough to defeat Lafayette, Southern Illinois and conference rival Furman in the playoffs on the road to the national championship game.

Appalachian State had winning seasons the past 20 of 21 years. They made it to the national semifinals at Montana in 2000, but never to a national championship. They also had an undefeated team in 1995, but still no NCAA crown. Since Head Coach Jerry Moore took over in 1989, Appalachian had made the playoffs 11 times, only to come up short each year. Moore even saved a pair of playoff tickets from a past loss to remind him of the unfinished business.

Jerry Moore and company made a coaching decision to insert injured All-American quarterback, Richie Williams, into the lineup for the final 30 minutes and two seconds of the game. Williams had sustained a pulled Achilles tendon in the semi-final victory over Furman the previous week. Having one unsuccessful Hail-Mary play under his belt at the end of the first half, Richie Williams started the second half intending to give a jump start to the offense.

Sophomore Trey Elder's first-half performance under center was productive, passing for 123 yards including a touchdown drive. Unfortunately, he also tossed an interception that led to a UNI touchdown in the second quarter. Passing just 10 of 26 for 129 yards, Williams played more of a motivational role during the championship game. His heroic hobbling down field after gaining first downs was more than enough to pump up Mountaineer squad. It was also sufficient for a drive capped off by a Kevin Richardson touchdown run from the 1 yard line.

Appalachian's offense made a valiant charge in the second half. Senior Zach Johnson's six receptions for 101 yards, a career performance, helped move the ball effectively. With the aid of a powerhouse defense, Appalachian marched to victory over Northern Iowa at Chattanooga's Finley Stadium in front of an audience of 20,236 plus the countless viewers tuning in on ESPN2.

It was the defense that provided the game-winning play. Marques Murrell forced a fumble by UNI quarterback Eric Sanders at the UNI 15 setting up a Jason Hunter scoop and score for the go ahead touchdown. The Fayetteville defensive-end tandem shined throughout the season, and made plenty of other big plays. Murrell and Hunter had 13 sacks a piece in the season and two each in the championship game.

After the big play put Appalachian up 21-16 with 9:14 remaining, crucial defensive plays held dangerous UNI quarterback Eric Sanders in check. As Williams and the familiar spread offense group eased the clock down, sophomore running back Kevin Richardson ran for a 10 yard gain on 3rd and long seal the Mountaineer victory. Adam King

From extensions, elevators, liberties, and heel stretches, there was a growing awareness of the dangers of cheerleading stunts as well as the injuries they entailed. Law makers across the US were toying with the idea of grounding most middle and high school level squads. If this were to occur, it would have a direct effect on the way collegiate squads perform. Some universities, such as the University of Nebraska already decided to ground their squad in 2003. This was after the school’s administration settled a $2.1 million lawsuit involving a cheerleader, who landed on her head several years before while doing a double back flip, causing limited use of her arms and legs. This ruling was later overturned, but the question it posed still lingered. Is stunting too dangerous?

Nikki Nelson, a freshman and secondary base for ASU’s squad, disagrees. “I think stunting is not that dangerous if done correctly. The problem is that cheerleading is overlooked.” Often times cheerleading was not regarded as a sport; let alone a very dangerous one. This led to squads receiving insufficient funds for adequate mats and other necessary equipment. “I faced this problem in high school,” Nelson said. “One time a girl received a concussion after falling out of a stunt onto a hard surface. She probably would have been okay if proper mats and a safe designated area for stunting would have been accessible to us.”

Doctors said that preventing injuries from stunts was possible. Squads should adhere to all rules and regulations, require proper spotting, and encourage strengthening workouts for the lower back, abdomen, and shoulders.

If Appalachian removed stunting from the performance, Nelson would not want to continue with the sport. “It is a large part of crowd appeal. Nothing we could do would get the crowd’s attention more.” • Megan Watson

What happens in an athletes typical day?
You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q: On a game day, what do you eat for breakfast or lunch?

A: I don't eat much before the game, normally half a bagel. After the game is when I chow down.

Q: When do you get up on gameday?

A: I normally wake around 9 or 9:30 but never earlier.

Q: What drills do you do to warm up?

A: Warming up normally consists of a lot of stretching and some tumbling. It's just a little something to get the blood flowing. We usually warm up 2 hours before game time.

Q: What is the last thing you do before a game?

A: Before walking out on the field or court I try to put myself in a happy place because I have to have a smile on for the whole game.

Territories of the United States never had so much representation in Appalachian State University's basketball program until two gifted Puerto Ricans joined the squad. Ryann Abraham, a freshman guard from Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, and his fellow rookie countryman Eddie Bermudez from Bayamon, were both important additions to the team. The pair offered some court talent, as well as some culture.

When Abraham first brought classic Puerto Rican dishes like beans, rice and steak into his apartment, it was a little strange to roommates Tyler Webb and Nathan Cranford. "How it's cooked is a little different," Abraham said. Besides foods, making the adjustment to life in the states and life in college basketball had its challenges. Communication was sometimes tough on and off the court. Mixing Spanish and English confused peers at times. Players and coaches would take their time to understand the Puerto Ricans if their English was confusing.

Basketball had its differences too. Playing in larger facilities was a change to Abraham and Bermudez. Rules that governed the team were a different pace than what the players were used to on the island. Adjustments were not as difficult for Abraham because he played in the United States for his senior year of high school at Starmount in Winston-Salem.

As the season progressed, the team looked more to the Puerto Rican posse. Bermudez chipped in around four points per game on the wing. Depicted as the floor general, Thompson repeatedly pulled the young men through tough games averaging about 18 points. His 25 points against Marshall led the Mountaineers to a big road victory to end a three-game losing streak during winter break. "I knew someone would have to play the role. I enjoy the challenge," Thompson said.

Facing the likes of several NCAA high calibers such as Wake Forest, North Carolina State and even conference foe Davidson, the team looked to Thompson as a leader. As the team suffered defeats from those three programs, spirits never wavered far from positive. "We have a good time no matter what the outcome," Thompson said.

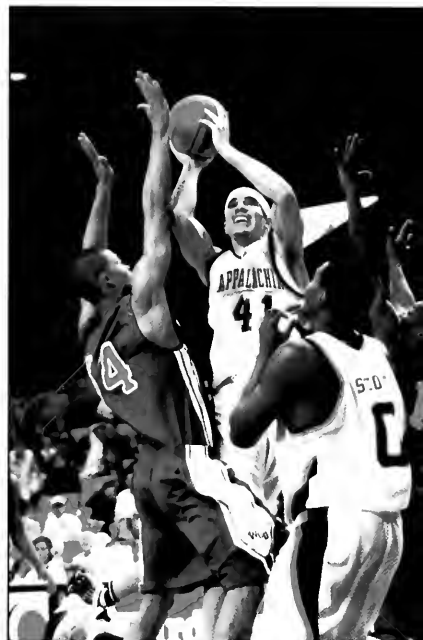

Basketball lifestyle was hard to escape for most players. With practice and games always looming, a court mentality was ever present. Players supported one another by spending time together off the court. Wrestling, playing PlayStation 2, laughing, joking and "just hanging out" were all popular pastimes. With the fellowship, players like Abraham and Bermudez felt a sense of family and comfort.

"I don't feel like they treat me differently," Abraham said. Adam King

Q: When do you wake up on a game day?

A: I'm usually up by 8:30 a.m. every day.

Q: What pregame rituals do you do?

A: Well, once I wake up on a game day, I don't go back to sleep. I wear rubber bands on each wrist 24/7. They are my good luck charms. I change them up after every time I feel I've played a sub par practice, game, or shoot around.

Q: What is something interesting/weird about you?

A: I designed all of my tattoos, as well as several tattoos for friends, family, and teammates.

Playing games on TV was a rare occasion for the Lady Mountaineers, an occasion that happened once in the regular season.

Limited publicity was an issue the team faced all season long, or more appropriately, limited attention. Competing with a national-champion football program and popular hoops counterparts on the men's side, drawing crowds was no cakewalk.

Charter Sports Southeast picked up the ladies' regular season bout at UT-Chattanooga, while also covering the Southern Conference semifinals and finals. Appalachian men received coverage from CSS and Fox Sports Network South during the regular season, with CSS and ESPN ESPN2 coverage at their conference tournament.

It was arguably a weak effort on the stations' part to some. "I'm disappointed. I think it should be better," head coach Adrienne Shuler said. "We've got the product to sell; it shouldn't be an issue these days. We shouldn't be talking about exposure."

Players did their best to cope despite the lack of camera time. "It's not a big deal. We don't talk about it much. I guess it's an honor to be on TV," junior forward Natalie Thomas said.

Television coverage had become more and more of an issue the last few years. Some leagues were still growing, but SoCon women's basketball was a better brand of basketball than several leagues in the Southeast region of the United States, Shuler said. •Adam King

Many people underestimate the difficulty of wrestling. Sure it takes strength, quickness, and stamina but have you ever stopped to think that a lot of the work happened off of the mat? Wrestling was one of a few sports that involved weight classes. Wrestlers had to weigh in one hour before the match so that there was not an unfair size advantage. Diet and food intake were two very important, yet two much forgotten aspects of wrestling.

"I hate that everyone can't wrestle at the weight class closest to their natural weight," griped sophomore wrestler Scott Ervin. "I don't think there is anything I really like about making weight, but it's something you get used to." When wrestlers found out that they were overweight before a match they could run, wrestle, or work out in anyway they could to suck out the last pounds of water weight. Ervin, 157 pounds and the 18th nationally ranked wrestler at this weight, knew how to control his diet. "I eat the same things as everyone else, just not as much. At the beginning of each season when I start to get my weight down I start eating smaller portions. At first it is hard, but in time your stomach shrinks and less food will fill you up."

Some people may have wondered, why go to all of that trouble just to be able to do what you love? Ervin had an answer for them. "It is definitely worth it. I love the sport, and what I have gotten from wrestling has been more than worth the sacrifices." •Adam King

[Opposite page] Senior Eric Burns holds down an opponent with a lock. Burns was able to add two victories to his record on senior night. He won by forfeit over an Anderson wrestler, and captured a pin-fall victory in his final match against a Carson-Newman foe. The Mountaineers took both matches, 37-15, and 37-9. • Alisha Park

What happens in an athletes typical day? You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q: On the day of a match, what do you normally eat for breakfast?

A: In wrestling you have to make weight before each competition. The day of a match or a tournament I don't eat breakfast until after weigh in.

Q: How long before the match do you start warming up?

A: I usually warm up about 25-30 minutes before the match starts. I will try to break a good sweat and try to get my heart rate up.

Q: What drills do you do to warm up?

A: I stretch and jog. Then I run through all the possible moves that I may use during matches.

Q: What is the last thing you do before stepping out onto the mat?

A: I go off by myself somewhere to psych myself up. It is very important for me to be mentally ready.

Chris Jarman was a chemistry major at Appalachian State who knew how to identify bonds between college golf and college life.

Golfer Jarman performed best his freshman and sophomore seasons. Shooting 82.5 junior season, he felt his game hit a wall, gradually declining to no tournament play in fall 2005. "I wish I was out there, but in some ways it's given me a chance to work on my academic aspect," Jarman said.

A positive outlook on things helped the Wilmington senior see that golf was not the only area to pour out his passions. Finishing up his undergraduate degree in chemistry, Jarman was an aspiring dentist. Applying for dental school at the University of North Carolina was a challenging project that Jarman did not see success on his first time.

"I think I've given it my best shot over the past four or five years of my life," Jarman said. "This is what I've wanted to do."

Coach Bill Dicus recognized Jarman's character—he knew his senior was a unique asset. "Chris is the kind of individual that makes you glad you are in coaching," Dicus said. "He's extremely devoted to his education, having pursued one of the most time-intensive majors we offer."

His desire to interact with people daily was one of the reasons Jarman wanted to provide dental services. He realized, even before college, it was a chance to help others.

As a high country college student, he volunteered for Western Youth Network, as a mentor to a 9-year-old boy in Watauga County. Going to movies, bowling and playing football were some of the activities the two were fond of. It was Jarman's time to influence someone else. "It's probably one of the more beneficial things that I've done for myself," Jarman said.

Balancing golf, service and academics helped his time management. He became an organized individual, and found himself playing a leadership role for teammates. "I want ASU golf to be better than it was," he said.

Jarman said he tried to do all and more that he was supposed to do on the golf team—a precious value to the team. "I will remember Chris for his leadership skills and commitment for 'doing the right thing,'" Dicus said. —Adam King

Q: What time do you get up on the day of a tournament?

A: Times differ, but I'm usually between 5 and 6 a.m.

The Duluth, Minn. veteran's ninth place finish helped put ASU in position. Her six-over (150) performance with a second-round 74 carried the team.

Although 48 strokes out of first, the Mountaineers were just four strokes behind Elon University—an interesting disposition on account of falling four strokes behind the Phoenix earlier in the season for a third of 16 finish at the Draper Valley Invitational.

Stocker and fellow senior Kaitlyn Johnston were ASU's top performers at the SoCon Tournament, averaging 77.86 and 81.52 respectively. Throughout the year, Stocker, Johnston and freshman Mary Kate Bowman paced the ASU efforts.

For a season that spanned from Sept. 13, 2005 to April 23, 2006 ASU held its own from course to course; through the hard days and the fortunate ones. •Adam King

An 0-4 conference start for the men's tennis team did not cause too much discouragement in the ranks. Team leaders such as seniors Andrew Taylor and Andrew Waters sparked some singles victories to carry the team's record. Taylor's 7-5 record and Waters' 7-6 show midway through the season helped the Mountaineers tremendously.

The squad's international backing proved beneficial as well. Skilled play from the South African Waters, his countryman Ryan Brookshaw and Bulgarian Dimitar Dimitrov provided important contributions.

Together, the three had a 21-16 singles record for the first segment of the season, and were a part of Appalachian's competitive doubles effort. They helped carry the Mountaineers to key wins vs. UNC-Asheville and at UNC-Charlotte.

Waters lifted the Mountaineers to their Southern Conference victory April 7 vs. UNC-Greensboro at the ASU Stadium Tennis Courts. Dimitrov and Waters teamed up to capture an 8-5 doubles win over Jason Steinhorn and Ryan Lewis.

Junior Alex Probst and sophomore Robert Hogewood also tallied a double victory to reinforce the Mountaineer effort. Four players got a taste of the glory as Waters, Taylor, Dimitrov and Probst each took singles wins. That day broke ASU even at a 9-9 overall record.

With three matches left in the season, players wanted to storm into the SoCon Championship strong. A five-match winning streak from March 17 through March 23 was included impressive victories over Gardner-Webb, Morehead State and Charlotte. Another five-match winning streak from April 7 through the first round of the SoCon Tournament put the Mountaineers in the second round, only to come up short against Furman.

Q: What time do you get up on the day of a match?

A: For an away match, I get up at 9. If we are at home, I get up at 10. I go to classes, then the match usually starts at 2.

Q: What pre-match rituals do you have?

A: I walk around campus with my iPod to get pumped up. Once I listen to my favorite songs and get in the zone. I feel like no one can touch me on the court. I do the same stretch routine before every match. I also wear a headband every time I play, it's just something I do.

Q: What other interesting things should we know about you?

A: I have more of a passion for basketball than I do for tennis. Sometimes I go to the gym and just shoot around by myself to get my body loose.

Although Boone is a beautiful place, the weather during the beginning months of winter and spring seasons could be unbearably cold. The women's tennis team was used to being on the road the entire first part of the season until the weather was favorable. Junior Anne Pierce knows this routine well.

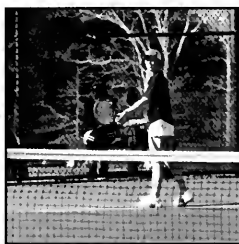

"Being on the road for the entire first part of the semester can be difficult, but it is unavoidable. We do not have indoor courts close by that are easily available for matches, so with snow we have no choice."

Although Pierce admitted that sitting in a van for hours could be uncomfortable after muscles began to tighten and the girls became fatigued, she believed it gave them a chance to bond.

"Traveling a lot does bring the team very close. Putting eight girls together in a small van for many hours does bring some funny and interesting moments."

Playing many away matches also affected the girls' performance.

"I love playing at home. Having friends around you and cheering you on can only help your game. People in the crowd motivate us by cheering us on." •Megan Watson [Opposite Page Left] Freshman pitcher Jason Rook slings a fastball down the strike zone. Rook started 11 games as a freshman, more than any other Mountaineer pitcher this season. Three rookie pitchers became three seasoned pitchers in Appalachian State University baseball's 2006 season. Freshmen Kyle Mussellman, Jason Rook and Garrett Sherrill took the hill this year for their collegiate debuts. Rook made outstanding gains in his 11-strikeout game vs. Army Feb. 26.

"It felt great," Rook said. "All my stuff was working." His outlook for the season was a good one from a pitcher's perspective, and a player in general. "I think we have a good chance to win a lot of games," Rook said. "Our pitching is great."

Not only did Rook have his rookie comrades around him, but he found there was a great support in the older players. Sophomore Adam Mills and all three senior pitchers were able to sustain the Mountaineers in big wins and fight hard through tough losses. Mills pitched a scoreless six innings vs. North Carolina A&T in a 10th inning heartbreaker loss. Reliever Zach Quate helped the Mountaineers stay close in a Chapel Hill battle against the University of North Carolina that would end with ASU losing 6-4.

"We have starters that can go into late innings and we have relievers that can come in and shut down pretty much anyone," Rook said. The freshmen corps stayed sharp. Sherrill got his first win in his first game when head coach Chris Pollard elected to start him against Buffalo in an early-season doubleheader. He did not allow an earned run in five innings in the 12-6 win.

Sherrill's and Mussellman's contributions were tremendous. Mussellman proved himself early on as well with his strong arm and notable speed. Senior pitchers such as Josh Fish and Chad Antley led the way for the young crew, giving support wherever possible. Appalachian was no stranger on the offensive side of things. Big hitters such as senior Joey Robinson set the tone for the season. •Adam King

What happens in an athlete's typical day? You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q: What time do you wake up on the day of a game?

A: It depends on what time the game is. If it is a night game then I normally wake up around 10 a.m. Otherwise, I wake up at 8 a.m.

Q: What pre-game rituals do you have?

A: I get dressed for the game in the same routine every game day.

Q: What other interesting things should we know about you?

A: When something is working I stick with it. I normally don't like to admit it but I am very superstitious. It just makes me feel completely ready to know that I have prepared my body and mind as much as possible for the game.

Forced to play on Watauga High School's baseball field, Mary Lutz, senior outfielder is ecstatic that the women's softball team will finally be getting their own field. The team has played off-campus since the program's beginning in 2001, and is planning to move into its new on-campus home in time for the 2007 season. The 1,000-seat softball stadium will include locker rooms and indoor batting cages.

"Even though we don't have it yet the idea of it is already affecting us," said Lutz. "It is in the back of our minds that next season we have to really prove to everyone that we deserve the field. When you are proud of the place you are playing you automatically will have the drive to play better."

Lutz believes that by having a home field, and having potentially more fans cheering them on will make a difference in the teams' performance as a whole. "Ideally you play 110% if the stands are empty or if you have a crowd. But to have people cheering you on after a good play will really help increase the motivation and endurance to do better." Megan Watson

What happens in an athletes typical day? You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q: What would you eat for breakfast if anything? Lunch?

A: I usually eat a big breakfast with lots of carbs. We usually play a double header and do not have time to eat lunch, so my breakfast has to stick with me a long time.

Q: What drills do you do while warming up?

A: We usually start by stretching and running and then we do hitting drills (soft toss, tee work, front toss, bunting drills) then we throw and field ground balls and fly balls.

Q: How long before the game do you start to warm up?

A: One and a half hours before.

Q: Do you shower the night before, or the morning of a game?

A: I usually shower the night before so I can get all the sleep I can in the mornings.

After Men's Track and Field took second place to Western Carolina University at the Southern Conference Indoor Championships, the Mountaineers were ready to step outside with the Catamounts.

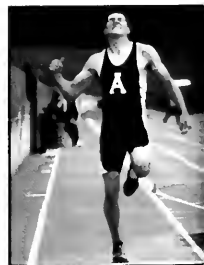

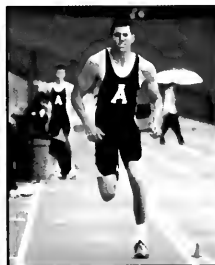

Stacking its runners, jumpers and throwers, ASU Track and Field geared up strong during outdoor meets. Sophomore Mark Sturgis was a catalyst in the Mountaineers' campaign. His triple-jump crowns at the conference Indoor Championships and Clemson Invitational helped position the team nicely in the points running meet by meet.

The chase for the Catamounts was on in the minds of players and staff. "The major contenders are always going to be us and Western," said head coach John Weaver. "So we're always in it."

Coming off the second place standing at the indoors behind Western, Weaver said it was important to come together as a team in addition to producing strong individual performances.

Sporadic deficiencies across the board caused a gap at the indoors ASU athletes never expected. "Doing better on the sprint side" was an area to key in on during indoor season because of Western's strengths in the area, Weaver said.

A Dynasty in the making

"It feels great to be part of a dynasty of great athletics," said Charlotte Baker, senior thrower on the women's track and field team. "It makes me proud to say that I was a member of this team."

Baker is in reference to the five consecutive championship indoor track titles, and four outdoor titles that the women have received. The team's secret success lies within their motivation for each other.

"Just being able to practice each and everyday with the level of competitors that are here is something that I think pushes us to work harder," said Baker. "We push each other in practice to go further. The conference champion is your teammate, what better way is there to gain confidence?"

According to Baker, aside for rigorous training, the women also look to each other for moral support.

"If a teammate needs something, everyone steps up to the plate. We cheer for each other and mean it. Track is an individual sport, but every time one person competes on this team, the entire team is competing."

With this type of attitude there is no doubt that the women will continue to receive championship titles for many seasons to come. They compete and train like true champions. —Megan Watson

What happens in an athletes typical day?
You think you know, but you have no idea.

Q On a day of a meet what time would you normally get up?

A: On a day of a meet, you have to eat about 3 hours before you race so I usually get up about 3 1/2 hours so I can get up and ready before eat. But if it's a really early race then I'll get up 3 1/2 hours before, eat breakfast and go back to sleep for a little before we leave for the track!

Q Do you carb up the night before, or eat what you want for dinner?

A: I like to carb up the night before but I just eat what I want to eat. I like to eat pasta usually, but I have eaten subs and pizza before and raced well. As long as you get a good healthy dinner and you don't eat anything out of the ordinary you'll be fine.
I personally think it's all mental.

Catch the Spirit was the marketing campaign used by the athletics department to generate fan interest in Appalachian State sports for the 2005-2006 season. Apparently the message was heard. Appalachian State football experienced the largest fan turnout in university history. A record crowd of 25,584 witnessed an Appalachian State football victory over archrival Western Carolina. During the regular season, Appalachian had an average of 23,169 fans per football game. This number was the second highest in the I-AA football nation. With a seating capacity of 16,650, Kidd Brewer Stadium was busting at the seams every game. The stadium became a horse shoe as fans blanketed the south end zone hill. Some fans even sought a good view in the trees surrounding the stadium.

Senior quarterback Richie Williams commented on the crowd energy at the Western Carolina game saying, "You know it's crazy when you see people sitting on the soccer locker room and up in the trees."

When the 2005 schedule was announced, many fans were upset because it included only four home games. Appalachian State's football team did the only thing they could: they earned three more home games with a No. 2 seed in the 16 team playoffs. Each week, a victory guaranteed another try at filling Kidd Brewer. During the national semifinal game against Furman University, fans smashed the old home play-off attendance record as 15,307 fans witnessed the epic battle. Mountaineer fans hit the road for the national championship game in Chattanooga, Tenn. six days later. The ASU ticket office was buzzing all week, as Appalachian's 5,000 ticket allotment was sold out by Wednesday of that week. # New sheriff in town

Much of the success in Appalachian State sports was traced to the behind-the-scenes influences of first-year Athletics Director Charlie Cobb.

As an assistant at North Carolina State University, Cobb brought with him some valuable experience necessary to fuel the Appalachian effort that enhanced athletics. One of the top priorities in Cobb's Athletics Vision list was a goal to create the best possible academic, athletic and social experience for student athletes.

"I think you've got to recruit kids that are, number one, serious about taking advantage of the opportunities here," Cobb said.

Scholarships were another concern for athletics. Officials looked to the Yosef Club to support funding for student athletes in order to take some strain off the Athletics Department. "The more dollars we can generate from external sources is going to lessen the amount we have to spend from our operating budget," Cobb said.

With a scholarship price tag of $2.4 million the previous year, athletic donors were appreciated in lightening the load of expenses. This allowed for spending in areas of improvement.

New practice and playing facilities were planned for construction in a $32 million venture announced by Cobb and Chancellor Kenneth E. Peacock on Nov. 12, 2005. The four-phase enhancement plan included a Kidd Brewer Stadium complex with expansion to the stadium itself, baseball and softball stadiums with an indoor training facility as well as soccer and field hockey stadiums.

Building facilities was intended to provide a "competitive advantage" for athletes while addressing equity issues with women's sports. Student fees would pay for about half the project while Yosef Club helped with other donations.

Getting the new amenities' construction underway was the biggest project facing Cobb when he started. He found it important to find ways of boosting Appalachian's credentials around the state. Cobb and the athletics department put a grand emphasis on amplifying black and gold. •Adam King

The Equestrian team was formed in 1998 as a club sport team. They were a Zone 4, Region 3 team for the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association. Some competitors included Duke University, East Carolina University, North Carolina State University, UNC-Chapel Hill, UNC-Greensboro, Virginia Tech, Wake Forest University, and Western Carolina University. The Dressage team was part of the Southwest region of the Intercollegiate-Interscholastic Dressage Association, which also included Averett University, Elon University, North Carolina State University, St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Virginia Intermont College, and Wake Forest University. The team focused on fundraising during the 2005-2006 year and searched for a new barn and coach.

The Women's Club Volleyball team was in its 15th year at Appalachian. Their mission stated "Our club team hopes to provide a fun but competitive volleyball atmosphere. Also, very importantly, we always hope to create a strong friendly and almost family-like group where we can all depend on each other." The team played in tournaments in both the fall and spring, but concentrated on most of its competitions in the spring semester. They have gone to nationals (in the spring) the past five years and made ASU history by finishing in the silver bracket last year. The team accepted members year-round. They competed in the Carolina Women's Club Volleyball League. The team competed against teams all over the nation, and continued to have winning seasons. The ASU Women's Club Volleyball team not only had many accomplishments on the court but also off the court by contributing many hours to service in our community. They hoped to leave a lasting impact not only on the campus, but also in society.

Women's club ultimate frisbee at ASU is a growing sport. The team is always looking for new members and invites people with all levels of experience to join. The team practices three times a week at State Farm Fields. This year, the team finished 6th overall at the Wolfpack Invitational hosted by North Carolina State University. The team had a 5-3 record in the tournament.

Club fencing at ASU provides students with a sport that serves as a great workout, but is also mentally engaging. This season the team hosted four home tournaments in Varsity Gym, two in the spring and two in the fall semester. The club travels as a group to plenty of competitive events throughout the state of North Carolina and sometimes out of the state. The team also offers free beginner and intermediate lessons to those who wish to learn more about this exciting sport.

The ASU club snowboarding team strived to take collegiate snowboarding to the next level. Each year the team participated in regional and national competitions. The athletes worked hard to succeed, representing themselves and Appalachian State. During each year of the team's existence, the ASU snowboarding team ranked in the top 5 teams nationally.

Students looked back on the year with further insight into their future careers and dreams that lay ahead. Appalachian State University witnessed a year of triumph that was worthy of being bragged about. No student would ever forget the rush of pride that came over them as the Mountaineer football team won the NCAA Division 1-AA National Championship title. As the graduates of the class of 2006 turn the final page of their college years and glance back at all the memories made, The Rhododendron hopes that their time spent here in Boone will never be forgotten. The 2005-2006 year was our time to shine while we let the nation see who we were. As this book comes to an end, we hope you will all take a little time to gaze into the future.

You know what they say; it's true; college really is the best time of your life. While in the minority of ASU graduates earning their degree in four years (or "leaving the party at 10:30 p.m." as my friends often tease) I have learned important lessons in my studies and gained invaluable experiences through Student Development. I've fostered a new appreciation for all the friends, family and people in my life that surround me with love and encouragement.

This past year has been challenging and interesting to say the least. I learned quickly the variety of energy drinks, hence above, from Red Bull, Rockstar, Full Throttle, etc., and as the staff can attest, was rarely seen without one in my hand. Juggling yearbook, academics, graduating and illness this year has made it one of my most difficult at ASU. Although I'd like to think that it was the energy drinks that got me through it all but I would be amiss to say so.

The people, including my family, Dino DiBernardi and David Freeman that I attribute to my success encouraged me to accept challenges, push my limits and to be confident. Being able to develop those skills, with the balance of those who made sure I didn't take life so seriously all of the time, (Kate, Midge, Sit, Ashley T. and my lovely little Ashley Holland) have fully prepared me for the world that awaits. I am proud of the person that I have become and I have all of you to thank for that.

Specific to the production of the book, The Appalachian staff, our graduate assistant Jess Hines, and adviser David Freeman really helped in any and every way that they could. The office was so harmonious and productive knowing anyone was there for you at the drop of a hat. Thank you so much for that support, as it became instrumental in completing the book!

I wish I were able to wish the staff good luck on next year's book, because I know how amazing a job you would do. Though my title may have been Editor-in-Chief, I always thought of y'all as a team, support system and close friends. Thank you for making my job easier and sticking through the rough times. Jenna, thank you for your diligence, attention to detail and dedication. Your designs never ceased to amaze me! You would've been perfect to run the book next year, and I was so excited to see what you were going to produce. However, life has a much bigger opportunity in store for you and I know you will conquer whatever that may be. Justin, you are the most considerate, hard-working, fun and encouraging person I have ever met. I've had so much fun working on the staff with you and I was always so comforted in knowing if I asked you to do something, that it would get done. You are an amazing person with so much going for you. Just make sure you have fun for you every now and then! To the rest of the staff, I hope it came across clearly how highly I think of each and every one of you this past year. All of you are very bright, funny and talented people who can achieve anything. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for your hard work and dedication. As Chancellor Peacock always emphasizes, "leaving your legacy" at ASU, be proud that you have done so in producing the last yearbook, and continue to find other ways to leave your legacy in your remaining time in school.

So now I will say goodbye: to friends and acquaintances, an ever changing schedule, sledding on lunch trays, late nights, the beautiful Appalachian Mountains, to an amazing college experience, and finally to The Rhododendron.

Farewell and God bless.

Jenna Starnes
Assistant Editor

Wow, another year has come and gone. It seems like only yesterday we were moving into the dorms, and now we're packing up and leaving Boone, only to return in a few months to do it all over again. Being involved with the yearbook the last three years has always been something I've enjoyed and taken pride in. Having been Student Life Editor my freshman and sophomore years helped prepare me to take on this role as Assistant Editor and provide some insight into what the sections were dealing with from day to day. The staff worked so hard this year to produce a quality book and without their hard work and dedication, none of this would have been possible.

It's always sad to see another year come to an end, to close the final spread, and to shut the book on this chapter of my life. Crystal, Emily, and Nellie - without you girls I would probably have gone crazy this year. I'll never forget our midnight rendezvous in the hall, our karaoke nights, our spontaneous trips to TCBY, dinners at The Broyhill Inn, the crazy Pictionary games, and all the laughs we had. Nothing is funnier than seeing Emily get scared so easily. I look forward to living with you girls again next year!

Lastly, I just want to thank Susan for doing such a great job keeping everyone together and motivated. Good luck on all your future endeavors! And also, David and Jess for providing all the support we needed.

I wish everyone the best that life has to offer, and even though we won't be reuniting to produce next year's book, I hope to see you again!

THANKS

In addition to the dedicated staff, we would not have been able to produce this book if it weren't for the help and support of many individuals. Within the university and out, The 2005-2006 staff would like to thank everyone who assisted us along the way. First of all, we would like to thank the Chancellor, Kenneth Peacock; Vice Chancellor for Student Development, Cindy Wallace; Director of the Center for Student Involvement, Dino DiBernardi; and Director of Student Publications and The Rhododendron adviser, David Freeman. At a time of budget cuts and expanding the campus, the aforementioned people believed in the yearbook program and found a way to make it work for one last year. For that opportunity, we would like to thank you for these past three years. We would like to thank Taylor Publishing for working with us in order to continue the book for this one last year on the Milestone Project. Our account executive, Milani Arguelles and the tech support staff at Taylor were always very prompt to answer any inquiries with our proofs. If it were not for the encouragement and hard work of Stephanie Petrovich, our sales representative, there is no way our book would succeed. Stephanie's patience and optimism was the driving force behind the completion of this book. We would like to thank all the following people on campus: Housing and Residence Life, Clubs, Organizations, Greeks, Athletics Department, Student Programs, The Registrar's Office, A.P.P.S. and all of the students who participated in the production of the book. The Appalachian has been an integral part in the photography of the book, and of office moral. We would like to thank Brad Nerman, Anna Oakes and Jonathan Williams for their continuous encouragement and support. They were always there to lend a helping way in anyway they could and it did not go unnoticed. After three years of generously sharing office space with our staff they will finally have free reign again! We also owe a lot of credit to Tina Parlier who generously and promptly posted any announcements we needed or club rosters from the electronic SDR system. Jess Hines was amazing in helping in every way she could in dealing with our many problems, even if it was calming us down! Jess, thank you for so much for your dedication to providing us with any information you could and for always being there if we needed you. I can firmly say this book would not be complete if it weren't for you. Finally, we would like to acknowledge everyone who has made the yearbook program possible by showing continued interest in The Rhododendron.

GO TOPHON

The 2006 Rhododendron was printed by Taylor Publishing Company in Dallas, Texas. Books were run on Komori presses with a press run of 400. The book consists of 328 full color pages not including the directory. The cover is a combination of silkscreen and hot foil gold lettering. The end sheets were 80# white stock and the content pages were 100# enamel. Stephanie Petrovich served as our sales representative and Milani Arguelles served as our account executive. The staff used Adobe InDesign CS2, Adobe Photoshop CS2 and YBPro! during production. The fonts used throughout the entire book consisted of various sizes of American Typewriter, Times, and Aeolus ATT. Jenna Starnes, the assistant editor, did a majority of the design elements. The National Championship football section was designed and put together by sports editor Eric Herman, Megan Watson and Adam King. The copy was written by the staff writers and edited by the copy editor, Jordan Will. Carl Wolfe Studios, Inc. took the student portraits. The combined photography department of The Appalachian and The Rhododendron photographers took the pictures in the book with Justin Tucker serving as photography editor. Susan E. Medley was the Editor-in-Chief, and Jenna Starnes was the assistant editor. Jess Hines was the Graduate Assistant and David Freeman was the adviser. The Rhododendron was distributed by mail to those who purchased the book during fall of the 2006-2007 academic year.

This publication is the finale of the yearbook program at Appalachian State University. Future inquires can be answered by contacting the address below:

Our Ilo, Our Joy –

There you are, and here am I, you looking beyond – with maybe a glance back – and I following that distant path to today. I can't know where your life will flow, or where your soul will unfold and capture others as surely as mine when I first set eyes on you and held you in my arms, in my heart, like some precious flame against the Finnish night. But I can share with you things a giant might tell a lil gerul whom he loved more than himself as he watched her grow, watched her chase gulls until she too could fly, watched as she rounded a corner into a dorm and he drove home with thoughts of her, but not really her anymore.

could tell you about eyes invariably melting me, turning my critical own back to question that I thought I surely knew. I could tell you about an ineffable silence cradling a private universe my uncertain questions barely penetrated. I could tell you of glimpses into that interior world where theatre lived and passions simmered and dreams occasionally broke the surface in laughter or sighs, of iron and spirit catching its breath and going out exuberantly to create life, your life.

But these are only thoughts of a father looking on, looking back, knowing but not knowing enough, amazed at the artistry of you while understanding that, of course, this is Ilo, this Ilo could not be otherwise.

So, what I can tell you of most truly today is the bitter sweetness of all our yesterdays – of songs and stories I hope will be remembered, of laughing together long enough to echo into tomorrow, of ideas we wove intensely into better cloth, of tears that healed, and of enduring pride – always. And something private to me alone, of holding a little hand and letting go...

So there I am and here you are, today. Our Ilo, my Joy.

Adam,

Congratulations on this achievement of excellence. Such a wonderful breath taking four years.

Thank you for including us.

We love you

Mom and Dad

Stephen D. Kramer

Steve,

Once again you have made me so proud of you and what you have accomplished. Congratulations and may you continue to have the same success in life. Stay happy and continue to be the best son anyone could want. Enjoy life!
I love you, Mom.

Chelsea Ann Simon

Chelsea,

Congratulations on your college graduation! We are very proud of all your accomplishments. We know God has special plans for your life to give you hope and a future (Jer. 29:11). Stay close to Him and He will greatly bless you. "Call to me and I will answer you and tell you great and unsearchable things you do not know."
Jeremiah 33:3

We love you,
Mommy, Daddy, and Sarah

Jason Hunter

Jason aka Stix.

Thanks for the trill of a lifetime!!! The 2005 Mountaineers gave the students, fans, parents, siblings, faculty, staff, and alumni the best Christmas gift ever, a "National Football Championship." The night of December 16, 2005 will live in our hearts and minds forever. When you scooped up the ball and ran it in for the winning touchdown, we all knew that we have in fact made it to the mountaintop. That was exhilarating!!!! So, I am personally thanking you, the 2005 Mountaineers football team, and the entire coaching staff for a piece of history that will live on forever. You guys were definitely in it to win it. We will always support you. Keep following your dreams. Congratulations Champ!!!!!!!!!!!!

We love you,
Mom, Dad, and Jr.

Daniel G. Seamster

Daniel,

Time has flown by so quickly. God blessed us in 1983 with a special son. You'll never know how much richer you have made our lives. It is our deepest hope that you find love and happiness where ever life takes you.

As you continue with the next steps in your journey, always remember that Mom and Dad and your grandparents love you and are very proud of you.

Let us offer just a few words of advice- always do your best, be humble, continue to learn, love deeply, be true to yourself, follow your heart, and listen to God.

Love-Always and Forever, Mom and Dad

Taylor K. Pelchar

Congratulations, you have now made it -- the BEGINNING...

To others the path to this day must have seemed easy, paved with everything necessary for you to be successful. Yes, you did have help from your family and friends, but the path was fraught with many difficulties that you and you alone, had to overcome. This is a strong indicator that you have the heart and drive to succeed at whatever you want to do. For that, your Mother and I are very proud. Celebrate what you have accomplished while planning where you want to go next and how to get there. We are excited to be the passengers on your new journey.

And now you embark on writing the rest of your story...

Mom & Dad

We knew from the day you were born that you would turn into a beautiful, intelligent, and
caring young woman.
We are so very proud of you!!

Congratulations on your graduation and your future is so BRIGHT
we gotta wear shades!!
We Love You,

Kenneth (Trey) Swicegood

Trey,

It seems like only yesterday that we were sitting on the ball field, watching you play T-ball. You've given us so many wonderful memories as you've grown up and become the young man that we're so proud of. Never forget the love and support of your family as you begin the next phase of your life. We love you and wish you all the happiness and success that life can bring.

Mom and Dad
